BANGOR CENTENNIAL QUEEN SLAIN

Former Athletic Star Arrested After Girl's Body Found

BY TOM KENNER
South Haven Correspondent
BANGOR — Law enforcement officials today were attempting to establish a motive in the brutal slaying of Bangor's Centennial queen near here early Monday.

The body of Terri Wilson, 18, clad only in a T-shirt, was discovered in the trunk of her parents' car along a Geneva township road about 5:40 a.m. The site is about halfway between South Haven and Bangor. The girl had been the object of a police search after her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson, M-41, Bangor, reported she had failed to return home after going to a South Haven restaurant-bar Sunday night.

The search also developed after three young Bangor men reported they heard muffled screams of a woman when they had attempted to drive off 65th street. They said they had been ordered away by a man. A former Bangor high school classmate of the victim, Carl Lee Johnson, 19, 10 High street, Bangor, was arraigned on a first degree murder charge in Seventh district court, South Haven, this morning, as a result of the death. He was ordered held without bond after demanding a preliminary examination. The hearing was set for July 12.

Grief Hangs Over Town

By JIM DeLAND
Assistant City Editor
BANGOR — Grief hangs heavy today over this small community, stunned by the murder of its popular Centennial Queen and the arrest of a former star high school athlete.

"It's just so terribly shocking," said Mrs. Charles Gent, retired high school secretary and mother of former professional football star and author Pete Gent. "She was such a lovely child. I've known her since she was a little girl."

Terri Wilson, 18, found beaten to death early Monday morning, was the kind of young woman a community could take to its heart.

YOUTHS ALERT POLICE: Richard Abbott (left), Anthony Marr (center) and Mike E. Hills reported to police that they heard muffled screams near car on 65th street in Geneva township early Monday morning and later told police location of car in which body of Terri Wilson was found.

An autopsy revealed the girl had been struck on the head approximately a dozen times and there appeared to be at least 30 stab wounds in her back, according to police. Preliminary indications were that the girl had been sexually molested and that her hands had been tied, according to Ward S. Hamlin, Van Buren county prosecutor.

A bloodied tire iron was found at the site where police believe the assault occurred. Police believe the assault occurred outside a vacant house trailer off 65th street north of CR-380, about three miles from where the car was located. The car was found on 60th street, south of M-43.

According to troopers the slaying occurred after Miss Wilson had left the Derby restaurant-bar just outside of South Haven sometime around 1:30 a.m.

Three Found Killed In Kalamazoo Area!

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — The bodies of three persons were found early today in a home on the West Side of Kalamazoo Township and state police arrested a man and his alleged hostage two hours later.

First reports indicated the three victims had been shot, gunned to death but police declined to confirm that. State police of the Paw Paw post said only that one of their cars on routine patrol spotted a car for which an alarm had been broadcast. After a brief chase on Kilgore and Portage roads, troopers Dennis Reinsch and Dave Johnson halted the fleeing car and took its occupants into custody without incident.

Troopers said preliminary investigation indicated the driver of the car was the husband and stepbrother of the second man in the car. Kalamazoo Township police declined to release any information on the victims pending notification of next of kin. Aides of the Kalamazoo County prosecutor's office were at the home along with staff members of the state police crime laboratory at Holland.

(The Kalamazoo telephone directory lists the home at 609 Campbell as the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Don Hartleroad. A neighbor said that the Hartleroads had a daughter.) The home was described as located in a well-to-do neighborhood.

Karen Johnson, 27, who was visiting at a home adjacent to the one where the killings took place, said she and her date heard what they thought at first were fireworks.

"It was really dark and we heard three or four loud bangs, then some desperate screaming," she recalled. "We knew then it was not just fireworks and we called the police."

"At least five minutes later, we saw a man leave the house and get into a dark car, either a Pinto or a Vega. The man then got back out and put something into the trunk."

"The driver did not speed away or spin his wheels. He just took off calmly."

A police source said the three victims were a mother, her daughter, and a man identified as her husband and stepfather to the daughter.

Vatican Seeks School Funds
VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican urged Roman Catholic bishops today to seek government funds to support their parochial school systems. It said Catholic schools are a necessary counterbalance to modern secularism and a guarantee of religious freedom. The Sacred Congregation for Catholic Education issued a 10,000-word document which also criticized Catholic school systems that cater mostly to the rich; urged priests, brothers and nuns not to abandon teaching; and insisted that the church's schools must meet high professional standards. The document noted that some governments already provide financial support to Catholic schools and "guarantee both the preservation of the special status of the Catholic school and its ability to perform its function adequately."

President Carter Shoots Down The B1

The manned bomber is to the Air Force what the battleship once was to the Navy.

Some years ago the Navy relegated the battleship to the mothball fleet in favor of super carriers, missile launching cruisers and submarines.

Jimmy Carter opened the Fourth of July weekend by mothballing the B1 bomber for the Air Force.

The B1 is a Rockwell International design to replace the B52, the mainstay of the Strategic Air Command, which admittedly is vulnerable to missile defenses.

The B1 is a huge supersonic machine which its sponsors within the Air Force and Rockwell International assert is the answer to just about any missile defense mechanism in the Russian's arsenal.

It is projected as a counterthrust for the U.S. which could survive an ICBM (intercontinental ballistic missile) barrage the Soviets and the Americans might fire simultaneously at one another. A B1 fleet presumably could remain aloft during that deadly exchange and deliver the knockout blow to the Kremlin.

Controversy has raged ever since its design left the drawing boards and contracts for prototypes issued.

Many weaponry students believe missile guidance is so far advanced as to leave the manned bomber in the museum status now held by the battleship.

They support the conclusion by pointing to the fact that the Air Force already has a cruise missile in prototype form and is designing newer models of even deadlier potential.

Liberals have fought the B1 as a waste of Uncle Sam's money which might better be shelved out for new and expanded social projects.

During the 1976 campaign Carter stated unequivocally that if installed in the White House he would cancel the B1's $25 billion program as a costly, ineffective weapon.

At the time the Air Force had three of the super bombers on hand and a fourth was partially completed in Rockwell International's hangars.

Shortly before Carter announced the cancellation the House had adopted a military appropriations bill to include construction of five more planes as a short step toward a programmed fleet of 244 airships.

Though the Republican minority in Congress promises a stiff fight, it is clear the Democrats have the votes to delete the appropriation.

On its face the cruise missile advocacy seems to have the upper hand over the B1.

The economy of $700,000 for a cruise missile which theoretically can deliver its payload within 40 feet of a target 1,700 miles distant over a B1 costing over $100 million is self apparent.

Additionally, the cruise missile can be launched from an airplane, a submarine or a land pad, whereas the B1 requires enplaning sites measured in multiples of square miles.

Presumably the supportive requirements for the cruise missile are much less than the B1s.

This debate around push button warfare as opposed to extensive human participation in a conflict is clouded by two factors always present in a peacetime state.

Neither the cruise missile nor the B1 has been battle tested. Consequently, the element of guesswork in either's capability is high. Jerry Ford upon hearing of Carter's decision said Jimmy is playing ducks and drakes with the national security.

The other fog bank is the secrecy surrounding the two weapons. Only a select few are privy to how either type might be expected to perform under combat conditions.

Carter's decision has caused two immediate effects.

His image as inclined to playing both ends of a dispute against the middle has sharpened into one of being a decisive executive.

Across the water the Russians are studying what position to take on the stalled SALT negotiations.

From the discussion's re-opening a few months ago the Kremlin has displayed more concern about the cruise missile than the B1. They have insisted the U.S. trade it off for concessions on parts of their armament.

Is Carter saying he will make such a trade, and if he does, what other weaponry string does Uncle Sam have to his bow?

Jimmy didn't go into that question in announcing the B1's dispatch to File 13.

Opportunity Underlies The U.S. Itch To Move

Americans may not regard themselves as a nomadic people, but their annual travels rival those of the most footloose Indian of the nineteenth century. One of every five will change his residence this year, if past averages continue.

For many, it will be a long distance move, away from family roots and acquaintances.

People naturally prefer a familiar abode with all the serenity of a friendly neighborhood. It takes a powerful incentive to entice so large a percentage of any population to pack up and leave for new horizons.

What is it that prompts Americans to forsake the comforts of habit and familiarity for unknown surroundings?

Opportunity, largely. A chance at a better job or a new life in a more prosperous area, or perhaps just a wish to break away from an established life. For some, the monotony of routine, reassuring though it is to be familiar with one's environment, is a boring existence to be avoided. Even at the cost of changing employment and neighborhoods.

Obviously, for 40 million Americans to change residences each year the attractions must be far more powerful than the discomforts. Equally apparent is the fact that security takes a back seat to opportunity.

This should not be surprising. One of the main differences between the world's two major societies is the emphasis placed upon opportunity and security.

Communist ideologies embrace security through all-powerful government paternalism. Individual opportunity is slight, and the common denominator remains low, but as long as the society remains solvent the individual will have many of his most basic necessities cared for.

Those who seek opportunity care little for security because with it goes lack of choice. A population which changes domiciles every five years demonstrates a strong preference for independence.

THE SOLUTION BEGINS WITH EDUCATION

Editor,

Lately, it seems that there has been much news focusing on what people do sexually. This just goes to show how warped some people really are. Murders and thefts are re-enacted daily on our book-tubes without much criticism, but we to be who shows two people enjoying each other sexually. (After all, we all know sex leads to heroin, right?) Like any other problem, the solution usually begins with education. So I have done a little research to help show just why Michigan, as well as all states, should incorporate some type of sex ed program available to at least high school adults, or minors with parental consent.

"Suppose our society's attitudes toward automobile driving were like its attitudes toward sex. Except for jokes and oblique allusions, we'd shun the subject. While privately debating when and how to explain it to adolescents, we'd try to keep them out of the driver's seat. Driver training in the schools would arouse some hysterical protests. The rising toll of auto accidents would be greeted by laments about a breakdown in morals. Instead of research to find out why people killed and maimed one another on the highways. And all the while, countless books, magazines, movies, and advertisements would glorify the thrills of driving — with or without a license!

After providing all kinds of opportunities for youth to learn to drive, we are in fact quite lenient with young traffic offenders. But after giving youth only partial or confused sexual instruction, with much popular glamorization of sex, we roundly condemn those who have sexual relations before they marry."

Let's face it, we live in an environment which promotes sex. "Until the last few decades, sexuality was a motive that often conflicted with standards and generated intense anxiety. But Society today takes a more permissive attitude toward sexual behavior; we are surrounded by books, movies, and television shows (all of which have an effect on standards) that seem to define sexual expression as desirable rather than shameful."

I feel the Legislators of this state should take it on their own to provide programs to teach sex education, as well as birth control, to the youths of Michigan rather than leave it up to half-truths learned on the streets, and in some cases, in the home.

Classes in sex education and birth control would allow students to speak on sexual experiences of themselves, and others, and develop a more realistic view on sex and, because of this, enjoy it more after marriage. Such classes could help students deal with useless feelings of guilt centered around "variations" of the sex act. This in turn would prepare the student to be of more value to his or her children.

Much of the problems surrounding sex today, do not stem from sex, but rather from the alarm that is placed about the topic of sex. Adults don't even support the sexual conduct of which they approve. For example, virgin boys complain that, while their age mates put them on the defensive about their chastity, their elders give them no encouragement in maintaining it. As a rule, adults have no idea what pattern of DOWAGIAC — The bell which tolled for over 50 years to call children to the Hill school six miles north of Dowagiac is missing from its tower atop the closed one-room schoolhouse. Thieves stole the bell Sunday afternoon from the old school. For Mr. and Mrs. Marion Wilkinson, of Willoway Farms, route 2, Dowagiac, the loss is much greater than that of an old bell. The ancient schoolhouse has played a part in the lives of five generations of the Wilkinson family and is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson. Mrs. Wilkinson taught at the school 50 years ago as her first job after she graduated from Benton Harbor high school. The couple said they bought the schoolhouse mainly for the bell.

The wagon was designed by Rex von Krohn, hospital administrator, and constructed by maintenance men at the hospital. The cart will feature gifts for infants and stuffed animals for toddlers. Gift items for older patients will include perfume bottles and other toilet articles. This has been the most successful Fourth of July in years on every division of the Goodrich Transit line, so states Harry D. Arnold, local agent. He says capacity crowds were carried, there was no roughness or drunkenness on any of the boats. In fact the class of passengers was far above the average of other years. From July 1 to 4, boats brought 10,000 persons into Benton Harbor. In addition the Benton Harbor division vessels carried 500 automobiles in both directions, the drivers preferring to send their cars by boat rather than drive them through to and from Chicago.

It appeared that the weather man was in sympathy with this rain-stricken community yesterday and the two cities enjoyed a red hot Fourth of July with the mercury hovering around the top of the thermometer. The gentlemen who parveyed Coney Island Red Hot did not find much of a sale for their wares and most of them were forced to go into the "Ice Cold Lemon" business before the day was out. The crowds were enormous, at least for the greased pig and climbing of the greased pole events. The celebration was in every way old fashioned.

Economy May Be Carter's Undoing

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's five-month honeymoon with the American people, a romance built more around style than substance, may be rapidly drawing to a close.

For the first time since he took office, nearly every major pollster in the country is now picking up evidence of a mounting disenchantment with Carter's substantive performance as president.

Highlighting the shift in sentiment is a growing public concern about Carter's handling of the economy — especially his failure to halt inflation, which has become the nation's number one problem as far as the average citizen is concerned.

Although Carter's personal popularity remains high — 81 per cent according to a June survey by Louis Harris — it has plummeted sharply from a peak approval rating of 75 per cent in late March.

That sort of drop, by itself, is disconcerting enough. Even though both Carter and his political advisers have been expecting a decline in his popularity, no president likes to see the proof in cold, hard figures.

For Carter, the slide is even more troubling because his phenomenal personal popularity — no matter how amorphous — has been his sole source of leverage on Capitol Hill. The members of Congress, who never shared the public's affection for the new president, nonetheless hesitated to cross him as long as he was riding high in the polls.

The real danger signals for Carter lie in the public's perception that inflation is once again threatening both the security of the average consumer and the economic recovery of the nation.

In testimony before the Joint Economic Committee, five leading pollsters this month warned that the surging consumer confidence of early 1977 is rapidly collapsing in the face of continuing inflation. And Carter is getting low marks for his handling of the problem, they said.

The Yankelovich, Skelly and White, Inc. firm, for instance, found only 25 per cent now approve of Carter's handling of the economy. On keeping down the cost of living, the Harris survey gave Carter a 60-34 negative rating.

Carter's economic advisers insist inflation is moderating now. They claim the fall-off in consumer spending anticipated in the second half of 1977 will be offset by increased business investment, sustaining the economic recovery.

They may be right, but the American people are deeply skeptical, if the pollsters are reading the mood accurately. "In the past few months, pessimism about the future of the economy has begun to take hold again," Harris reported.

In April, for the first time in five years, a narrow plurality of the public felt the country would not be in a recession 12 months later. By June, a discouraging 45-36 plurality once again felt we will have a recession a year from now.

Public opinion surveys also indicate Carter has failed to educate the American people on the significance of the nation's energy crisis, let alone persuade them his proposed solutions are wise.

Gallup found, a month after the President's televised "the sky is falling" speech on energy, that only 52 per cent of the people — a bare majority — even knew that the nation must import oil from foreign countries to meet our needs.

With readings like that from the grassroots, it is obvious that Carter is in for a rough time on Capitol Hill on his economic policy and his ambitious energy program as well. The real test of his leadership lies ahead.

Russia Will Bar Israeli Teams

Sources close to the international Olympic picture inform me that the chances of Israeli athletes competing in the 1980 Moscow Games are exactly zero. Israel will be excluded.

The exclusion will take place at the direction of Moscow, but the Soviet rule will not be an open one. Rather, it will take place behind a Third World facade. Just as Israel was excluded from the Asian Olympic Games, so it will be kept out of the big show in Moscow.

Do not imagine that this will be a mere "athletic" item. It will be a dramatic exhibition of political muscle before a global audience of hundreds of millions. It will be an important psychological step in the delegitimation of Israel, its reduction to the status of non-nation.

The 1980 Moscow Games will be the biggest media event in history. As the Soviets see it, and as they have said in their official publications, the Games will be an enormous political plus. The preparation has been lengthy and painstaking. The Moscow Games will be an extravaganza on the model of the 1936 Berlin Games, an enormous metaphor, a celebration of the Soviet system and an image of the future as the Soviets would like to see it.

According to my sources, Israel — along with several other "unfriendly" nations — will not be added to that metaphor.

Of course, the visual Olympic metaphor will also not include the gross Soviet economic failures, crimes, violations of human rights, massive weapons program, and expansionist foreign policy.

My initial reaction to the disclosure that Israel would be excluded was that, if the Soviets tried anything like that, it would wreck the Games. Individuals and teams would pull out, refusing to be part of this corrupt charade. Would any athlete, knowing what we now now, have participated in the 1936 Olympics? If the Soviets politicize the Moscow Games to that degree, network TV will pack up its cameras and go home. ... or so I THOUGHT.

Wrong, according to my source. The reality is chilling. Nothing at all happened when the Canadians excluded Taiwan from the Montreal Games. The Moscow Games will take place no matter how grossly the Soviets exploit them. The U.S. Olympic committee will content itself with an impotent pro forma protest.

Have we really forgotten the example of Berlin in 1936, and what soon followed? Have we forgotten Munich in 1972, the outrages and the egregious cheating? The sympathetic treatment of the Soviets by ABC and Jim McKay at Montreal in 1976?

The 1980 Games in Moscow are shaping up as the most corrupt and politicized in history.

What is called for at this time is a Congressional resolution to the effect that the exclusion of any nation from the Games for political reasons should be grounds for U.S. withdrawal.

Benton Housing Complex Hit By 5th Major Fire

By RALPH LUTZ
Staff Writer

The fifth major fire in three years at Berrien Homes destroyed the interior of one apartment and extensively damaged another Sunday afternoon.

Damage was estimated at $37,500 in the apartments on Crystal avenue, Benton township, according to township Fire Lt. Lawrence Harris.

None of the occupants, including at least five children, was reported injured. Lt. Harris and Fireman William C. Reed sustained apparently minor injuries.

Harris said the fire apparently began in the apartment of LaVerne Brown, 1143 North Crystal, when a pan of food was left on a stove burner and ignited. Flames spread through interior walls to the adjoining apartment of Linda Fryson, and heat also scorched exterior walls of a third apartment reported occupied by Patricia Dawson.

Firemen said the interior of LaVerne Brown's apartment was destroyed. Berrien Homes is a 160-unit federally-subsidized apartment complex that opened in 1971 under sponsorship of Berrien County Council of Churches. It was planned for low to middle income families.

In July 1974, Stanley Scott, 26, a Benton Harbor high school art teacher was killed in a fire that consumed the interior of his Berrien Homes apartment. Three days later another apartment was damaged heavily by fire.

In September, 1976, interiors of two apartments were destroyed. These blazes also occurred within three days of each other.

Benton township Fire Chief Ken Kraiger has been critical of the construction, saying it causes rapid spread of fires at Berrien Homes.

Kraiger today said during the past year, a fire resistant paint has been applied with apparent success, but had not been used in the units that burned Sunday. Kraiger said the paint is used whenever a living unit is redecorated.

Kraiger said nothing came of a meeting last October among local, federal and Council of Churches officials. Kraiger said he wanted each unit equipped with sheet rock walls. He said this would be too costly.

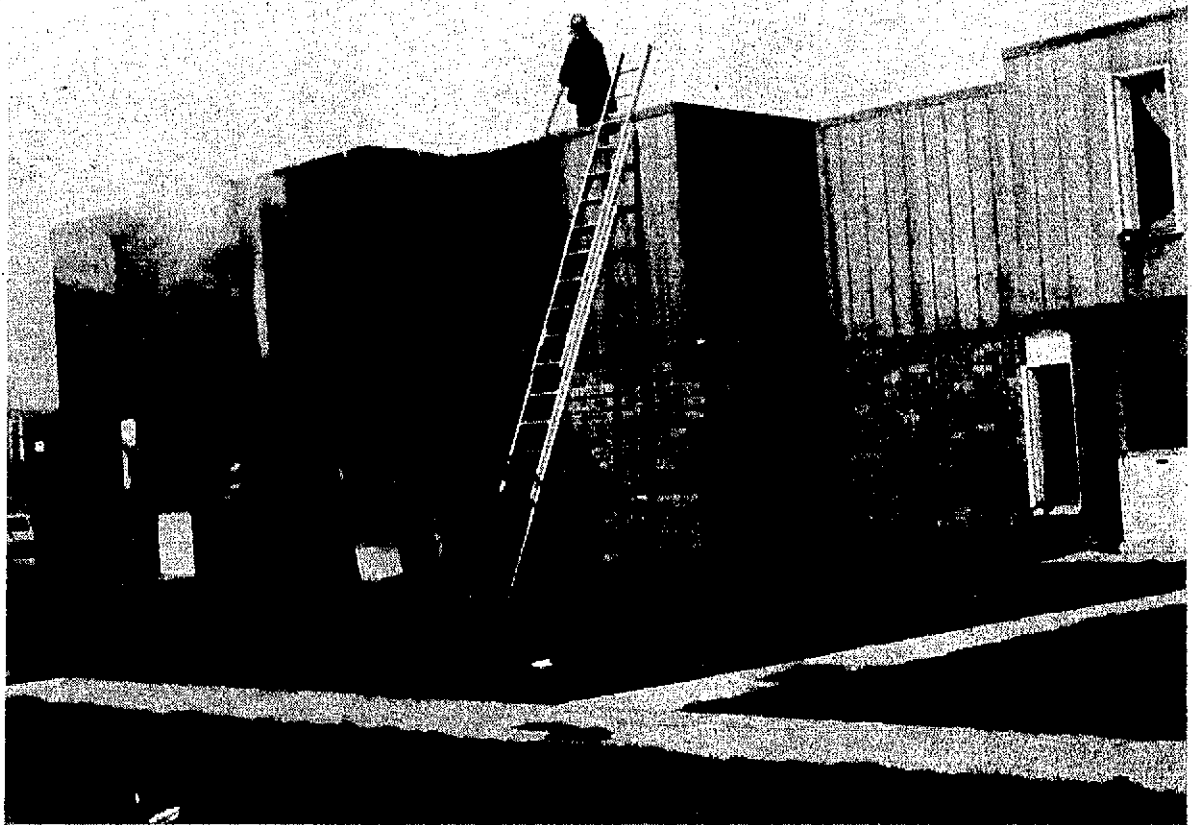

In Sunday's fire, Harris, 30, sustained a groin injury stepping over a burned stairway. Reed, 50, received burns about the head. The department said both were treated at Mercy hospital and returned to regular duties.

The fire was reported at 4:45 p.m. and was battled until about 6:10 p.m.

Mrs. Brown told this newspaper she was outside on a rear patio with all but her youngest child, when smoke appeared. She identified her children as Karen, 11; Barbara, 10; Bobby, 7; and Christopher, 4. Also reported present was a Godchild of Mrs. Brown, Janie Berry, 16, who was visiting.

Mrs. Brown said Christopher got out of the apartment uninjured.

Mrs. Brown said Linda Fryson has a son, who was away at the time. It wasn't known if Patricia Dawson has children. Her apartment was not reported damaged inside.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Klocko of Flushing, Mich., pulled out of the I-94 rest area west of Calhoun about 5:54 p.m. Saturday, not knowing that one of their eight children was left behind.

Berrien Sheriff's Sgt. James Bale said a CB radio operator found the stranded child, Susan Klocko, 12, and summoned help. The Berrien sheriff's department put out an alert both to Paw Paw and Kalamazoo for the Klocko auto, a station wagon.

Bale said Klocko drove to Paw Paw, just over 20 miles away, before the family realized that Susan was missing. He then turned around, before being located by authorities, and returned to the rest area. Susan was stranded for about 45 minutes, Bale reported.

Parolee Missing; Woman Prisoner Flees Hospital

Berrien sheriff's officers reported a day parolee failed to return to jail, and a woman prisoner escaped custody at Memorial hospital where she had been taken for an examination.

Deputies said Tamy Jean Sharrett, 19, of Chicago, who was arrested Saturday in connection with an alleged uttering and publishing offense, escaped at 4:53 p.m. Sunday from Memorial hospital, St. Joseph.

She had been taken to the hospital for an examination after she complained of feeling ill. She was escorted by Sgt. James Bale and Deputy Jack Reed, deputies said.

Officers said a nurse allowed the woman to use a restroom while she was in an examination room and out of sight of the officers. Deputies said she apparently escaped down a stairway leading to a loading dock. She was described as white, 5 feet 4 inches tall, and weighing 102 pounds with brown eyes and long brown hair. She was reported wearing blue overalls.

In an unrelated incident, deputies said a day parolee serving a 30-day jail sentence for a traffic violation failed to return to jail Friday night and still remains at large.

He was identified as Eddie Hall, 42, whose last known address was 847 Colfax avenue, Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor Patrolman Dale Easton said he almost apprehended Hall early Sunday, but lost Hall in a foot chase.

Easton said he stopped a car at 2:04 a.m. at Main and Seeley streets. Easton said a man, identified as Hall by a driver's license, got out and stood on a lawn while Easton radioed for a computer check.

The man apparently heard the radio report saying that Hall was being sought and he fled on foot and disappeared in an alley, Easton said.

Hall was sentenced by District Judge John T. Hammond to serve 30 days and pay a fine and costs of $100 on June 28. He had been found guilty by a six-member jury of disregarding a stop sign in St. Joseph.

An inmate at the jail was injured in his cell Sunday night, according to officers. The cause of the injury was under investigation, it was reported.

Treated at Memorial hospital was Johnny Foster, 46, of 506 Catherine, Benton township.

Guard Steven Schmucke said he discovered Foster lying on the cell floor during rounds at 6:32 p.m. Schmucke reported that other inmates said Foster fainted and hit his head on the floor.

The sheriff's department said Foster has been in jail since June 1 on a charge of arson.

Auto Mishap In Lincoln Breaks Legs Of Boy, 12

A 12-year-old Lincoln township boy sustained fractures of both legs when he was struck by an auto on John Beers road, near Hawatha lane, Lincoln township, about 9 p.m. Saturday according to Berrien sheriff's deputies.

Lined in "good" condition at Memorial hospital this morning was Mark A. Bryan, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald N. Bryan, 3624 Dennis street.

Deputies identified the driver of the car as Robert S. Lawrick, 16, of 1962 Maiden lane, St. Joseph township, and witnesses said the boy ran behind a westbound vehicle into the path of the eastbound Lawrick auto. No tickets were issued, officers reported.

Five people sustained apparently minor injuries in three other accidents investigated over the weekend by Berrien sheriff's officers and state police of the Benton Harbor post.

Three people were reported treated and released from Berrien General hospital after a one-car crash investigated by sheriff's deputies at 3:47 p.m. Sunday on Pipestone road near Hillendale road, Sedus township.

Injured were the driver, Dimple Jones, 23, of 773 Vineyard, Benton Harbor, and passengers Larry Smith, 26, Box 275, Eau Claire, and Shirley Butler, 26, Box 91, Berrien Center.

Deputies said the auto went 400 feet off the roadway into a field and rolled over. Deputies said Jones was cited for reckless driving.

State police of the Benton Harbor post said David A. Passmore, 21, Trivolt, Ill., was injured at 8:15 p.m. Sunday in the collision of a motorcycle he was driving and a truck on Red Arrow highway, near Maplewood, Lake township. Passmore was treated and released from Memorial hospital.

Troopers said the truck was operated by Ronnie Whitlow, 21, of 470 McAllister avenue, Benton Harbor, who was unhurt. Troopers said Passmore was ticketed for failure to signal when changing lanes.

Deputy Sheriff Robert Greer reported Linda Marie Zienke, 16, of 718 Lonesome Pine trail, St. Joseph township, was ticketed for driving too fast for conditions Monday morning after her car left Pipestone road in Sedus township and struck an embankment.

Greer said she was slightly injured but did not indicate whether she sought treatment after the 8:30 a.m. accident. The accident occurred near Dutch lane.

Knead Dough Until Smooth

Your bread recipe reads: "Knead until smooth and satiny." How long is that? You've never made bread before. Most doughs require from eight to 10 minutes of kneading before you recognize a smooth and satiny surface.

After 10 minutes, grasp your dough in one hand, squeezing it slightly with your fingers. If fully developed, the opposite side of the dough ball should feel smooth and taut. You will also see bubbly blisters under the surface.

NO NICKS

'Your Problems' By Ann Landers

The Facts About Smoking

Dear Ann Landers: I have read so much about the dangers of cigarette smoking that I'm beginning to have trouble separating the facts from fiction. So many letters have appeared in your column from people who are annoyed by cigarette smoke. I wonder if perhaps that is the reason so many people are against it.

Please print the proven truth. I mean facts — not just emotional reactions from irritated cranks. Thank you. — Uncertain in N.Y.

Dear Uncertain: If it's facts you want, here are the latest from the Royal College of Physicians as reported by the Associated Press. The story was filed from London on June 1, 1977.

The most unsettling statement to emerge from the study was this: "Each cigarette costs 5½ minutes from a smoker's life-span."

This study, entitled "Smoking for Health," was the third in-depth investigation by the Royal College during the past 15 years. It was prepared in cooperation with all of Britain's medical colleges.

The Royal College, a leading medical institution that dates back to 1518, called for tough, new anti-smoking measures, including a ban on tobacco advertising to end what was described as the "lethal epidemic" caused by tobacco.

The Royal College called for withdrawal of all but lower-tar cigarettes, higher prices for cigarettes and a much stronger health warning than now appears on cigarette packs.

The study says roughly one in three smokers dies because of smoking, that a smoker who quits gains immediate benefit. Within 10 to 15 years after he quits smoking, the extra risk of dying early disappears.

It was estimated that in Britain 90 million working days a year are lost through illness caused by smoking.

If the Royal College's proposals were adopted, millions of Britons would have to change their smoking habits.

Withdrawal of all but lower-tar cigarettes, for example, would force an estimated 80 per cent of smokers to switch brands if they didn't quit.

The Royal College called current government action against smoking "paltry and hesitating."

Wants To Quit

Dear Ann: I am writing because of the recent rash of letters from smokers who insist on their right to smoke if they want to. They claim it's a "free country" and the non-smokers are infringing on their "rights."

I am a two-pack-a-day smoker who agrees with the non-smokers who say the air belongs to everyone and nobody has the right to pollute it. If I am the only smoker in the group I don't smoke. If I am in a home where there are no ashtrays out, I don't ask for one. The message is clear and I respect it.

I just want you to know that not all smokers are rude and inconsiderate. I hate myself for smoking and wish I could quit.

— Hooked in Hinsdale

Dear Hooked: The key to your problem is in those three words, "I hate myself." I'm convinced that anyone who continues to smoke or eat or drink excessively — knowing full well his behavior may be life-threatening — does indeed "hate himself" and needs professional help.

Phone your local chapter of the American Cancer Society for the list of self-help groups. You CAN stop smoking if you want to. Millions have already done so.

Even if drinking is the "in" thing in your crowd, it needs to be kept out. Learn the facts from Ann Landers' booklet, "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Self-Analysis

Ten years ago I didn't know anything about myself. I didn't know who I was, where I was or where I was going.

I didn't know how I felt about my plants, my tennis game, breast feeding, nicknames, waxed dental floss or pre-marital sex. I had never analyzed my marriage, my dreams, my hostilities, or my reasons for taking a tape recorder with me to the labor room.

I crossed my legs at the ankle and slept with my fists closed, but never knew why. I fantasized about Paul Newman calling me out of a high-level Girl Scout cookie meeting because he was unable to sleep. My marriage was working, but I couldn't put my finger on it.

Then came the tide of self-analysis books — one, two, sometimes three and four a month inviting me to dissect my motivations for living and understand myself.

So, I became my own best friend, went around saying, "I'm okay, you're okay" and opened my marriage at both ends. It has taken ten years of self-analysis, but I've discovered something I never knew about me before. I'm boring.

I liked me better when I was mysterious and shallow. Even my anxiety attacks aren't any fun anymore. What good does it do me to get uptight when deep down inside I know it's merely a psychological signal to myself to alert me to future dangers and threats?

My friend, Mayva, is really into self-analysis and continues to drive me crazy. The other day

I tried to down a vitamin pill when Mayva said, "Are you having trouble swallowing that pill?"

"Yes."

"What year did your dog die?"

"Two years ago. What's that got to do with swallowing a pill?"

"Why are you so hostile about the dog's death?"

"I am not hostile!"

"Have you ever felt you were too assertive and tended to dominate your marriage?"

"Mayva, I am sick to death of analyzing my every move."

"You're uptight. Maybe you should meditate" for 30 minutes.

"I can't. I forgot my mantra."

Her eyebrow raised, "That's rather Freudian, isn't it?"

"I call it old age."

"I think you're going through a predictable life crisis."

"Which one?"

"I don't know. Gail Sheehy only went through age 40 in 'Passages.' You're probably right. We think too much about ourselves."

"Tell me about it," I said, putting my arm over her shoulder.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I would like to know if you could recommend anything for dry skin. My skin is light and I get brown spots and they peel off. My doctor advised me to wear a hat most always. When out in the sunlight all makeup burns my face. I have tried several soaps and they don't work either. I also have dry places on my body and would appreciate some advice.

DEAR READER — Fair-skinned people do have more trouble with the sun than others. You probably need to use a good sunscreen all year around. Not all so-called sun lotions really protect you from the sun. I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots, and Cancer, which contains a discussion of sun screens, both by a physical barrier which are the safe-like preparations and the chemical screens that you can't see. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for this issue to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

These brown spots do come out from exposure to the sun. The only way to prevent them is by preventing sun damage. Wearing a hat and any other protective garment is a good idea.

You should also use a skin moisturizer. Any substance that is oily and will form a film over the skin will do the job. The oily substance will prevent the evaporation of moisture from the skin and prevent drying. Ordinary emollient oils, such as corn oil, will work as well as the most expensive creams for this purpose.

People who are prone to dry skin should avoid bathing too often. Almost any soap and certainly water will wash away natural skin surface oils that are there to keep your skin moisturized.

The way to stay clean and avoid excessive skin drying is to use soap only on the problem areas where smells originate, such as under the arms, and just shower the rest of the body in plain water. This becomes more important as you get older since we tend to lose our natural skin oils over large parts of the body.

DEAR DR. LAMB — On so many of the soap operas, every time a woman becomes pregnant she experiences dizzy spells and usually faints once or twice. Is it common for a woman to faint in early pregnancy? What causes her to faint? Also what would happen if one fainted, say at home, when she was alone?

DEAR READER — I'm afraid that is more soap opera than medical fact. Most pregnant women do not faint in early pregnancy. In fact many women feel better in the early months of pregnancy than they did before. Some have morning nausea and related problems but many do not.

Later in pregnancy the more developed baby may compress the large veins that return the blood from the lower part of the body to the heart and that can lead to fainting but even that is not common.

If a woman is anemic with her pregnancy it can increase her tendency to faint. Should a pregnant woman faint at home alone it is likely that nothing would happen. Most healthy people who faint recover rather quickly when they are lying down and the normal circulatory mechanisms are resumed.

Because of the volume of mail Dr. Lamb cannot answer your letters personally but he will answer representative letters of general interest in his column.

Pierre Jais of France has long been recognized as one of the world's greatest players. The test of greatness includes a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of the game, correct principles of bidding and play plus a real extra — the ability to take unusual action successfully.

His three heart opening is an example. He might well have opened one heart, but look what that bid did to his opponents. North passed and South elected to double with his two-suit hand. North jumped to five clubs and the cinch spade game had gone to that source of space and time from which no traveler returns.

On the other hand, it took some real play by Jais to beat the five-diamond contract. He started by leading his ace of clubs. Then he boldly underled his ace of hearts. East produced the king and led back a club.

There was no way to keep Jais' jack of trumps from collecting the setting trick.

An Arkansas reader wants to know what we respond to partner's one-no-trump opening bid with:

We simply raise to three no-trump. Our good six-card suit warrants a game contract and we will try for the nine trick game. We will be wrong sometimes, but right in the long run.

Some Disability Pensioners Drawing Big Salaries

By BROOKS JACKSON and EVANS WITT

Associated Press Writers
WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal civil servant retired on grounds that he was disabled, yet earned a total of $117,560 in a new job in 1974 and 1975, an internal Civil Service Commission report shows.

Another disability pensioner held a job that paid him a total of $100,943 in the same two years.

Yet another supposedly disabled federal pensioner earned $76,793 in a single year, and still another earned $66,444 in one year.

At the same time, the four were drawing disability pensions ranging from $404 to $1,793 per month, paid mostly by the taxpayers.

The pensioners, whose names were not listed, are among the commission's "Top 20" — persons who earned the most in new jobs while drawing pension checks granted because they could not perform their old government jobs efficiently.

These 20 get the most from the system that grants disability pensions to federal workers who in many cases still are able to work.

On the average, the 20 earned more than $29,000 a year in 1974 and 1975, while drawing disability pensions of $8,281 per year. And most of the pension was considered tax-free "sick pay."

The 20 are a small minority among the more than 279,000 disability pensioners drawing more than $1.5 billion a year. Yet they illustrate dramatically features of the system that have drawn criticism.

Under the system:

—The definition of disability is so broad and vague that virtually any ailment, including those that are relatively easy to take, is grounds for a pension. Nearly 98 per cent of those who apply for disability retirement get one.

Monitoring whether disabled pensioners have recovered their earning power depends almost entirely on unverified earnings reports by the pensioners themselves. Officials admit that fraud usually goes undetected, and when it is discovered, the pensioner virtually never is prosecuted.

Government agencies, according to the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, often are unwilling to find light-duty assignments for employees with medical problems, instead pushing them into the retirement rolls.

The system also is relatively stingy when it comes to those who need help the most: young, low-paid federal workers who become totally unable to work. Many of these workers would receive more money if they were covered by Social Security rather than Civil Service, a report by the General Accounting Office said.

To receive a disability pension a federal civil servant need only be declared medically unable to perform one or more parts of his job efficiently.

In contrast, the Social Security disability system and most disability programs in private industry pay only when a person is unable to work.

"We've got a liberal disability provision compared to private industry, there's no denying that," said Thomas A. Tinsley, retirement director at the Civil Service Commission.

It Wasn't Perfect, But Michigan Enjoyed Holiday

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
Although fog hampered judging in a Mackinac Island stone-skipping contest and it wasn't windy enough in Detroit to set a world kite-flying record, Michigan residents still enjoyed the July 4 weekend, heading for beaches and parks across the state.

The stone skipping contest ended in a tie between John Kolar, Jr., 19, of Birmingham, and Glenn Loy, Jr., 22, of Grand Blanc, as each equaled the two-year-old world record of 24 skips.

The early lead was taken by 9-year-old Bill Padgett of Dearborn, who started with 23 skips but finished behind the winners.

Kolar and Loy had problems trying to split up the prizes. One took David's Trophy, a 75-pound rock, and the other took home its wooden stand. They also split a year's supply of fudge.

The wind died Monday before Detroit's Chuck Muey could get 1,776 red, white and blue kites — and his last hurrah for the Bicentennial — off the roof of Cobo Hall.

Muey said he would try again on Labor Day or next Fourth of July.

Beaches at Warren Dunes, Holland, Grand Haven, Traverse City, Boyne City and Mitchell state parks were crammed to capacity Monday, although fog spoiled outdoor activities farther north, according to the Automobile Club of Michigan.

Crowds at beaches near the Mackinac Bridge, Petoskey and Manistee were below expected levels due to the fog. No beaches in Southeastern Michigan were completely full, the Auto Club said.

All state park campgrounds in the Lower Peninsula had filled up by early Friday, according to Auto Club.

Parks in the Upper Peninsula were more crowded than usual, with only eight of 19 state campgrounds reporting vacancies.

Michigan holiday drivers, meanwhile, had exceeded last year's traffic death toll of 19 by midnight Monday with 23 fatal accidents reported by state police.

The 1976 holiday weekend was the safest summer holiday in 14 years, even though tourism was at a peak, officials said.

The weekend's only major traffic jam was caused by a rock festival Saturday at the Martin Dragway between Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids. About 100 cars were towed for parking along the shoulder and median of U.S. 131.

And Houghton's Library Bar

Frisbee team won the 20th annual International "Guts" Frisbee Tournament Sunday at Houghton, relegating defending champ Air Aces from Rochester, Mich., to second place. "Guts" Frisbee involves hurling the plastic discs at finger fracturing speeds. The event attracted 56 teams from throughout the midwest, the West Coast and Canada.

ROCK CONCERT NEAR KAZOO: "The Michigan Jam" rock concert jammed more than 35,000 people into the Martin Dragway area near Kalamazoo Saturday with music and camaraderie. A major traffic jam tied up vehicles for miles on nearby US-131, forcing police to have about 100 cars towed away for parking on the shoulder and median. (AP Wirephoto)

Celestial Fireworks End Holiday

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Fourth of July weekend blew out with celestial fireworks as severe thunderstorms swept across Michigan late Monday and early Tuesday, toppling trees and power lines, slowing homebound vacationers and apparently contributing to the crash of a light plane.

Several funnel clouds were spotted in lower Michigan, and at least two of them touched down, causing some damage.

Four persons died Monday night in the crash of a twin-engine plane in northwest Lower Michigan during heavy thunderstorms, state police said. Three of the victims were from the Muskegon area and the fourth from Grand Rapids, according to Trooper Philip Archer of the Manistee state police post. There were no survivors in the crash, which occurred almost exactly at 8 p.m.

Identified early today were the pilot, Michael Joseph Reich, 23, of Norton Shores, and the passengers: Walter Dale Thompson, 37, of Spring Lake; George Henry Schumber, 37, of Muskegon Heights; and Edward J. Brook, 28, of Grand Rapids.

The crash occurred in a wooded, swampy area of north central Mason County, about 20 miles south of Manistee and one mile northeast of Friesland, while the area was being battered by thunderstorms accompanied by high winds, troopers said.

A witness who notified state police of the crash said the plane seemed to fall from the sky during heavy turbulence, high winds and rain.

Troopers said the wreckage of the twin engine Piper Apache was strewn over a path more than half a mile long. The mangled bodies of the victims were found separately over an area of more than 700 square feet, troopers said.

The crash site was cordoned off, and Federal Aviation Administration investigators were expected to arrive on the scene early this morning.

Funnel cloud sightings were reported in Genesee, Saginaw, Muskegon, Montcalm, Shiawassee, and Oakland counties Monday night, as tornado warnings were issued for several counties in the central and western portions of the state.

Nearly the entire southern half of Lower Michigan was under severe thunderstorm warnings or watches, some extending until 5 o'clock this morning.

The most severe storm damage reports came from Genesee and Isabella counties. A funnel cloud touched down at a trailer park in Richfield Township, according to state police, demolishing three trailers and moving 12 others off their foundations.

In Isabella County, high winds reportedly destroyed one hangar and tore the roof off another at the Mount Pleasant airport. Several airplanes also were reported damaged.

High winds and hail downed trees in Clare County near Clare and heavy rain, strong winds and hail up to one inch in diameter were reported in the Lake George area.

Trees and power lines also were down in sections of Gratiot and Isabella Counties.

A funnel cloud was sighted by Milford police in western Oakland County shortly before midnight, but no damage was reported there.

The Montcalm County sheriff's department said trees were uprooted and a funnel cloud sighted near Lake Montcalm, Gowen and Howard City. A tree reportedly fell on a house near the eastern county line.

Severe lightning and winds gusting up to 70 miles per hour were reported at Clio, in Genesee County.

POLITICIANS HELD

Army Coup In Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — The army took over the Pakistani government today after four months of political unrest and the threat of new violence between supporters and foes of Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Radio Pakistan announced the coup and said the 49-year-old prime minister and other political leaders had been placed in "temporary protective custody."

The broadcast said those arrested were from both Bhutto's Pakistan People's party and the opposition Pakistan National Alliance. But only Bhutto was identified.

"Peace and tranquility prevail everywhere," the broadcast said. It added that the army was guarding all vital installations.

Unofficial reports said the army began making arrests about 2 a.m. Radio Pakistan said the takeover was accomplished by about 7:30 a.m.

The government radio said the army chief of staff, Gen. Zia-ul-Haq would address the nation in a special broadcast tonight. Meanwhile, there was no announcement of a ruling junta or a military prime minister.

It was believed that the army's leaders would be reluctant to retain control for a prolonged period because of the difficulties the military had when it was in power from 1958 until December 1971.

Military rule then was brought down by economic decline, the secession movement in East Pakistan, student disturbances, political and economic discontent and the army's defeat by the Indian Army in the December, 1971, war which made East Pakistan the new nation of Bangladesh.

The last military president, Gen. Mohammed Yahya Khan, resigned immediately after the war, and Bhutto, the head of the largest party in the National Assembly and the leading politician in what was left of the country, became president in 1973, when a new constitution restored parliamentary government and made the presidency a ceremonial figurehead, he became prime minister.

The Alliance charged Bhutto and his party with large-scale ballot-box stuffing and intimidation of the voters.

was similar to one in which the body was later found.

The three were identified by police as Anthony Marr, 18, route 2, Bangor; Mike Hills, 19, route 2, Bangor; Richard Lee Abbott, 18, 318 East Arlington street, Bangor.

Police said they searched the area described by the youths without success. During a subsequent interview one of the youths said he recognized the suspicious-looking man as a former classmate of his at Bangor high school. He identified the man after looking at a 1976 Bangor high school yearbook.

Troopers said they went to Johnson's home at 10 High street, Bangor and that he explained he had been arguing with a girl friend when confronted by the youths.

Harlin said police suspicions were aroused when they found what appeared to be blood on Johnson's vehicle.

Troopers said Miss Wilson was reported missing by her parents about 4:10 a.m. They said their daughter had not girl friends at the Derby, a restaurant-bar on Blue Star Memorial highway, South Haven township, after a Bangor centennial activity Sunday night.

Witnesses told police Miss Wilson arrived alone at the Derby about 11:30 p.m. She reportedly was seen leaving the Derby, again alone, at about 1:30 a.m.

Witnesses further told police they saw Johnson at the Derby. Police said Johnson admitted to having danced with Miss Wilson while at the Derby.

At 5:30 a.m. the same youths who had reported the suspicious man reported to police they had found Miss Wilson's car on 66th street, approximately two-thirds of a mile south of M-43.

The car was located about three miles from where the alleged assault occurred.

The street is under construction and had been barricaded at M-43.

Officers said they found the body in the blood-spattered trunk at approximately 5:40 a.m. Johnson was taken into custody at his home at about 6:00 a.m. He did not resist, police said.

Police said they had to force open the trunk with pry-bars. They said the outside of the vehicle was splattered with blood.

Officers said it appeared an attempt had been made to burn the car because charred paper and women's clothing were found stuffed in the gas tank line.

Death was attributed to massive head wounds by Dr. Daniel Glaser, pathologist from Kalamazoo who conducted the autopsy at the McKane funeral home, Bangor. The victim was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. O. T. Lorenz of South Haven, deputy deputy Van Buren medical examiner.

Technicians from the state police crime lab in Holland spent most of yesterday examining the area of the alleged attack and the car in which the victim was found.

State police said they executed a warrant on Johnson's home in Bangor in attempt to find an additional weapon and clothing. Police said they had not located the victim's clothing, except for the T-shirt she was wearing when found.

Private funeral services will be held Wednesday at 11 a.m. at McKane funeral home, Bangor, for Miss Wilson. A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday at the Bangor Congregational church. Burial will be in Monk cemetery.

Miss Wilson was born Feb. 7, 1959, in South Haven. She was a 1977 graduate of Bangor high school, a member of Bangor Congregational church, and was employed at Du-Wel Products, Inc., Bangor.

Survivors include her parents, James and Jeanette Wilson; a brother, Mark; and grandparents, Mrs. Glenn Wilson, Bangor, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pineau, Bangor.

Memorials may be made to the church in memory of her.

Seven Drown In Michigan

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
Some freak accidents brought the total of holiday drownings to seven in Michigan.

At Bear Lake in Kalkaska County, an East Lansing man jumped out of a moving motorboat and drowned after the propeller struck his head.

Volunteer divers from Midland recovered the body of Gordon Chafee, 21, an hour after Sunday's accident.

A Monroe County farmer drowned in the attempt to pull a pickup truck from a ditch with a tractor, state police said.

Troopers said Warren Ault, 22, of Petersburg, was driving the tractor home through the ditch when the vehicle overturned. He was pinned under neath and drowned in 12-to-14 inches of water and six inches of mud.

The Blue Waver Bridge, which links Port Huron with Sarnia, Ont., at the mouth of the St. Clair River, was the scene of an apparent suicide leap Monday.

Police said a 30-year-old Warren woman, Martha Jennings, abandoned her car at the center of the 340-foot high span and jumped over the railing.

Her body was recovered a short time later. She was the second person to die after leaping off the bridge in less than a month.

In Fair Haven, a Macomb County man drowned in a canal off Lake St. Clair Sunday morning, state police said.

The body of William Charles Butler, 59, of St. Clair Shores, was recovered shortly after he fell into the canal attempting to enter a boat, troopers reported.

The victim had a history of strokes, and investigators said that could have played a part in the drowning, which occurred in St. Clair County's Clay Township.

Gene DeMaggio, 22, of St. Clair Shores, drowned Saturday on a canoe ride with a friend on Lake Michigan Friday in Muskegon. Authorities said she failed to surface after a dive.

Betty Motter, 48, of Plainwell, drowned Friday night in the Kalamazoo River near Plainwell after falling from a bridge.

LAW DEGREE: Rodney Schermer, son of Mrs. Rose Schermer, Stevensville, received law degree recently from State University of New York in Buffalo, N.Y. He and his wife, Sally, reside in Buffalo.

CARE Keeps I-94 In Berrien Accident-Free Over Holiday

I-94 in Berrien county was accident free over the long holiday weekend, according to state police of the Benton Harbor post.

Michigan state police and Indiana state police participated in Operation CARE (Combined Accident Reduction Effort) over the weekend.

CARE provided beefed-up patrols during peak hours of holiday traffic, from noon to 10 p.m. on Monday and Friday, according to Sgt. Gary Ernst, Benton Harbor post coordinator for the effort.

CARE also meant more tickets than usual were issued.

Ernst reported peak hours, mostly for speeding, in Berrien county. Troopers also issued warnings to 36 motorists and provided assistance to 27 motorists in need of help.

Ernst called CARE "quite successful" but said a total evaluation of the effort along the complete length of I-94 in Michigan was not available this morning.

Two Face Robbery Counts

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Arraignment was scheduled before a federal magistrate today for two young men charged with robbing an area bank of more than $26,000. The FBI said Timothy Bitten, 23, formerly of suburban Kentwood, and Todd Kennel, 19, of Kentwood, were arrested during the weekend.

Bitten was arrested at Muskegon where, authorities said, he was on a prison release program after his conviction for a Kent County break-in. The money from Friday's robbery of a branch of the Union Bank in Kentwood was recovered from a wooded area in northern Barry County on Sunday, FBI agents said.

COSTUME WINNERS: Entry "End of Small World" by four children from two families won top honors in costume category in Stevensville Kiddies parade Sunday. Youngsters are left to right, Kelly and Katie Brugman, children of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brugman, 1561 North Teakwood, Stevensville and Kathy and Janice VanderMolen, children of Mr. and Mrs. Donald VanderMolen 1676 North Teakwood, Stevensville.

ORIGINALITY AWARD: Theresa Hierholzer and her dog Snooper were chosen as originality award winner in Stevensville Kiddies parade Sunday with entry, "Oscar Mayer Weiner." Theresa is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hierholzer, 5573 Ridge road, Stevensville.

PETS ENTRY-WINNER: Melinda and Brad Wroblewski, children of Mr. and Mrs. William Wroblewski, 6025 De Morrow road, Stevensville, took top honors in pet category of Stevensville Kiddies parade Sunday with aid of their dog Patches.

Supt. Raymond M. Sreboth said the board will elect its officers for the coming year. Mrs. Sharon L. Kalling of Niles joins the board after being elected last month by representatives of constituent school districts. Incumbent Benjamin Nye won re-election to a second term.

Hoosier Toddler Drowns

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind. — A three-year-old boy drowned in Lake Michigan here Sunday when the rubber raft he and his mother were in capsized, according to the Coast Guard at Michigan City.

The victim was identified as James Oscar Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Gardner, 1010 Lake Shore drive, Michigan City.

Coast Guardsmen said the mother and son were not wearing life vests.

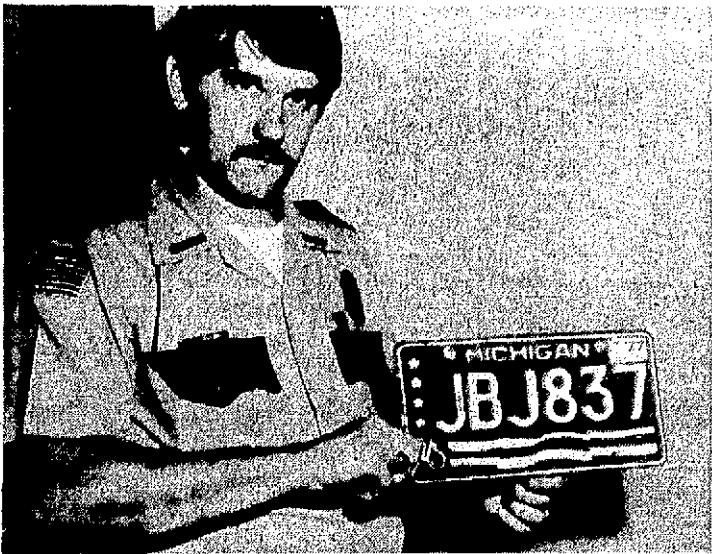

Mrs. Gardner launched the raft about 3 p.m. in an attempt to rescue her husband whom she had seen capsize in his 18-foot sailboat, the Coast Guard said.

Mrs. Gardner was rescued by nearby boaters. Her husband, who was wearing a life vest, was also picked up.

The boy's body was recovered by the Coast Guard about three hours later, Coast Guardsmen said.

Woman Hurt In Fall At Concert

Lois Magner, 79, of 801 Port street, St. Joseph, was hospitalized yesterday evening after she fell out of a lawn chair and rolled down a steep embankment while attending the St. Joseph Municipal band concert. She was reported in good condition this morning at Memorial hospital, St. Joseph. St. Joseph police said she rolled down the steep embankment alongside the band shell at Lake Bluff park and was stopped by a retaining fence.

ALLEGED HOMEMADE TAB: Benton township Patrolman Kim Fowler holds Michigan license plate he said has a homemade 1977 at upper right corner. Plate was seized after auto was stopped at 12:43 p.m. Sunday at Main street and Fair avenue for not having license plate in front. Fowler said driver, William Buford, 26, of 1121 McAllister avenue, Benton Harbor, was booked on charge of possession of an altered license plate and also was booked on charges of driving while his license was suspended and having open intoxicants in a vehicle. VA Patient's Widow Sues U.S.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A woman whose husband died during a series of 1975 breathing failures at the Veterans Administration hospital here has filed a $2.25 million damage claim against the federal government.

The document was prepared on behalf of Mrs. Cora Lee Blaine, whose husband, Bennie, suffered three breathing failures before he died Aug. 20, 1975.

The claim, which asks $2,251,076.35, was filed with John McMillan, district counsel for the VA in Detroit.

It says Blaine entered the hospital with a side pain on June 21 and had a massive cyst removed. Ten days later, a second operation was performed when the surgery wound split open.

Later, a third operation was completed when a wire used in stitching broke in Blaine's bowel, which ruptured, according to the claim.

The claim, filed by attorney George Sallade, does not specifically name the two Filipino nurses on trial in federal court on charges stemming from the breathing failures.

The claim does, however, state that "employees" of the hospital injected Blaine "with certain unknown drugs and medicines which caused him to stop breathing with the eventual stoppage of all kidney function."

Filipina Narciso, 31, of Ypsilanti, is charged with four counts of poisoning and one count of murder. Leonora Perez, 33, of Ann Arbor, is charged with three counts of poisoning. Both women also face conspiracy charges. Jury deliberations in the case entered their seventh day today.

One of Mrs. Perez' poisoning counts involves Blaine's breathing failure.

In addition, the document lists "operations performed negligently and negligent care at the hospital" as among the causes of Blaine's death.

The claim asks $250,000 in damages for Mrs. Blaine, $1.5 million for being deprived of the companionship of her husband, and $500,000 for the pain and suffering which she allegedly suffered for 38 days before his death. It also asks for funeral expenses, attorney fees and other costs.

Reformatory 'Worn Out'

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Reformatory at Ionia is substandard in everything from psychological services to plumbing, and there is little hope of fixing it up, according to a state report.

The 107-page report, issued by the office of State Auditor General Albert Lee, says the facility is overcrowded and "worn out" with heat, water, electrical and sewer systems held together with "baling wire."

"We have managed to hold it together for the last 10 years with baling wire, and we will just have to hold it together for another 10," Wurden Dale Foltz said after learning of the report.

The Ionia facility was scheduled for demolition in 1973. But that was the year of a dramatic increase in Michigan's prison population and the state was forced to keep it open.

The reformatory has a listed capacity of 1,200 inmates but currently houses more than 1,500.

Nurses Jury Returns To Huddle

DETROIT (AP) — Jury deliberations were to enter their 34th hour at 9 a.m. today in the trial of two nurses accused of poisoning patients at a veterans' hospital in 1975.

The nine women and three men who comprise the U.S. District Court panel met for only three hours Monday, taking the rest of the day off to join their families for the holiday.

The jury had not been sequestered during the 13-week trial, but has been quartered at a downtown hotel since beginning deliberations Wednesday.

"Enjoy your day," presiding Judge Philip Pratt told the jurors as they left the courtroom Monday.

Filipina Narciso, 31, of Ypsilanti, and Leonora Perez, 33, of Ann Arbor, were accused of poisoning patients at the Ann Arbor Veterans Administration Hospital during the summer of 1975, when the hospital was hit by more than 50 mysterious breathing failures.

Miss Narciso was charged with murdering one patient and poisoning four. Mrs. Perez was charged with three poisonings. Both nurses also faced a charge of conspiracy. Earlier in the trial the judge directed verdicts of acquittal on additional charges.

The government contended the nurses gave the patients a powerful muscle-relaxing drug, Pavulon, which caused them to stop breathing.

Escapees Hunted In Osceola County

REED CITY, Mich. (AP) — The search continued early today for two men who broke out of the Osceola County Jail in Reed City after knocking out a guard, sheriff's deputies said.

The escapees were identified as Daniel Waite, 21, of Reed City and Roger Vallad, 22, of Plainfield, Ind.

Vallad was a trustee and was out of his cell when the break occurred Monday night, deputies said.

According to deputies, Vallad lured deputy Steven Sadler into the cell area by pretending there was an emergency, then struck Sadler over the head with an unknown object.

Sadler was not seriously hurt, deputies said.

Roadblocks were set up through out the county Monday night, but were removed early today, a deputy said.

Waite was awaiting sentencing after being convicted on two charges of criminal sexual conduct. Vallad was in jail on a variety of misdemeanor charges, including traffic violations and telephone harassment, according to jail records.

TAKEOVER NOT AUTOMATIC

When buying an existing home, taking over a mortgage can be practical and profitable. But be cautious. Don't take for granted that assigning the mortgage to another is automatic.

The lender has a stake in who's going to repay him. Many mortgages are written which specifically prohibit this practice without the consent of the mortgage lender. The lender will acceleration clause which make the whole balance due and payable upon sale.

The bank can activate or waive this clause depending on the credit rating of the buyer, maintenance of the property or spread between original and current interest rates. If the interest spread is great - don't count on a takeover mortgage.

Before you advertise "low interest, no takeover", and set yourself up for a letdown, why not have us check your mortgage and advise you.

MECHANIC HELD IN PLAINS MELEE

Foes Break Up Ohio KKK Rally

By JOHN W. GONZALEZ
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Flagstuffs, signboards, eggs and fists were thrown as about 100 young demonstrators broke up a Ku Klux Klan antibus rally on the steps of the Sta-tthouse.

State police restored order quickly, and Ku Klux Klan
Imperial Wizard Dale Reusch,

38, vowed to return in September. He said he would "meet violence with violence."

The July 4th melee here was the second Klan rally broken up violently over the holiday weekend.

In Plains, Ga., President Carter's hometown, Saturday night, Buddy Cochran injured 30 persons, 19 of whom were admitted to hospital, when he drove his sports car through a crowd of 250 persons into a platform on which Bill Wilkinson, Imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan, was speaking.

The 30-year-old auto mechanic from Americus, Ga., about 10 miles west of Plains, was charged with aggravated assault and held on $190,000 bond.

Some 300 persons protesting the Columbus rally paraded on the outskirts of the state capitol grounds Monday, but when Reusch began his speech, about 100 protesters moved up the steps.

"You talk sick," one man told Reusch.

"We will go on with the rally regardless of the agitation," replied Reusch.

Holding a can of chemical skin irritant for self defense in one hand and a microphone in the other, and flanked by about 20 supporters, Reusch resumed his speech.

The protesters pressed forward, knocking Reusch to the ground. Klansmen, who wielded flagstuffs like baseball bats, took advantage of their higher ground atop the steps.

The protesters smashed the public address system and perpetrated Reusch and Klansmen with eggs, chanting "Ku Klux Klan, seum of the land."

Reusch was spat upon and stripped of his hooded purple Klan robe. He was cut in the face during the fracas. A TELEVISION CAMERAMAN
ALSO WAS INJURED SLIGHTLY.

Arrested were: George Preston, 29, of Cincinnati, charged with inciting to violence; Brenda Hutchinson, 18, of Columbus, charged with disturbing a lawful meeting; and Annette Benuechamp, 17, cited with a delinquency charge of disturbing a lawful meeting.

Reusch said he would seek a state permit to hold a rally at the same place in September, after he seeks advice from the American Civil Liberties Union on how to insure free speech.

Asked what his message was to have been, Reusch said, "The Klan will fight. We will kill. We have to rebuild."

RABBI PLEDGES: NO NAZIS: Leader of Jewish Defense League, Rabbi Meir Kahane, works his way through crowd of some 500 anti-Nazi demonstrators in predominantly Jewish Chicago suburb of Skokie Monday. Kahane told the crowd that allowing Nazis to march in Skokie is spitting "in the graves of six million Jews" killed in World War II. A Chicago Nazi group had planned to march in Skokie Sunday, but postponed it due to legal considerations. (AP Wirephoto)

Union Seeks Benefits For B1 Jobless

DETROIT (AP) — "Workers deserve the same considerations the federal government provides the corporations," United Auto Workers officials said in a telegram to Secretary of Defense Harold Brown Monday.

The union asked the Defense Department to provide extra unemployment benefits for workers laid off due to President Carter's decision to cancel further B1 bomber production.

"The federal government did not cut off all funds for Rockwell International (prime contractor for the airplane) the day after the B1 decision, yet thousands of loyal workers have been laid off with little prospect of new employment," the telegram said.

"Just as the corporations affected are provided with funds as the project phases down, we believe the Defense Department has an obligation to ease the transition for the workers. Money should be made available immediately for supplemental unemployment benefits for these unemployed as a result of this decision," the UAW telegram said.

Dog Kills Visiting Grandchild

MONROE, Mich. (AP) — A three-month old boy was killed by a Great Dane belonging to his grandparents while the infant's family was making a holiday visit, according to Monroe County sheriff's deputies.

The dog crushed the skull of Jeremy Tomkinson, according to police. The baby's body was found Saturday on the floor of a bedroom at his grandparents' home in Frenchtown Township, north of here.

Police said the child's parents and grandparents were in the backyard at the time.

They said the dog, which belongs to the child's grandparents, apparently opened the door to the room where the baby was sleeping and attacked the child.

The dog was being held in isolation by the Monroe County Animal Control Unit. A Sheriff's Department spokesman said a court hearing would be conducted on the incident to decide if the animal should be destroyed.

More Americans Are Choosing Foreign Compacts

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — After four years of frustrating breakdowns and expensive repair bills, John Vrazo decided this past spring to trade in his 1973 Chevrolet Vega and buy a new car.

The 27-year-old Detroit resident considered a Chevrolet, but "they weren't really that good or cheap." And when two Chevy dealers refused to take his Vega, even for nothing, he went looking elsewhere. Vrazo wound up with a Toyota Corolla with steel-belted radials, AM-FM radio and "a nice interior" — for $3,445 out the door.

That pattern is being repeated by record numbers of Americans across the country this year, and it's providing a bonanza for makers of small, foreign cars at the expense of small domestic models.

In the first five months of 1977, import sales are running at a record clip. Americans bought 881,000 of them, an increase of 54 per cent from 1976, and sales for the full year could hit two million for the first time.

Since the spring, imports have been mind-boggling — accounting for better than one of every five new cars sold in the country.

Import Sales Running At Record Clip In 1977

March sales of 188,000 broke a four-year-old single-month record. In April, sales jumped to 205,000. Amazed U.S. auto executives said it couldn't happen again. Then in May, sales rose to 220,000. That was 2,500 more cars than sold by Ford, the nation's No. 2 automaker.

Domestic and foreign car executives say the tremendous demand for imports — mostly small, inexpensive and fuel-sipping models from Japan — is a temporary phenomenon, a brief hysterical reaction to President Carter's plea in late April for energy conservation.

"It's a short-term thing," said Norman D. Lean, vice president of the U.S. distributor for Toyota, the nation's best-selling import. "Some of these things are irrational. It happened in 1973 (after the Arab oil embargo). As we move away from Carter's energy message, people will fall back on more traditional buying patterns."

But that doesn't explain why sales of small, inexpensive and fuel-sipping domestic cars are not picking up, or why big domestic cars continue to sell like hotcakes. While May sales of imports were up 74 per cent from May 1976 and big U.S. cars rose 10 per cent, domestic sub-compacts were off 7 per cent.

Vrazo, single and a city employee, said he purchased his Toyota for two main reasons: low price and quality.

"I bought my Vega because it was the cheapest car I could buy at the time (1973)," he said. "I didn't consider the Japanese too much then. My father worked for General Motors and so I was GM-oriented."

"This time I was determined to get a small, economical car, but I didn't want an American one. I came to the conclusion that foreign cars are better made."

Auto executives in Detroit concede Japanese imports have a price advantage. But they bristle at consumer surveys showing people believe foreign cars are built better, saying it's a myth.

The importers downplay price. They say their cars sell well mainly because buyers believe the vehicles are built better to last longer.

"Price is the imports' only real advantage," said a Ford market analyst. "There is just no way we can come within $250 car for car with the Japanese. The Europeans can't come within $500 of them."

He said Japanese imports are particularly strong among first-time buyers, who are very price-conscious. He noted, too, that import sales are highest on the two coasts, where shipping costs are lowest, but generally weak in the Midwest and South.

There is general agreement that Japanese labor costs are lower than here, but that alone does not explain the imports' price edge. The Japanese attribute it to better technology and workers who are more productive than their American counterparts.

But Detroit executives claim Japan somehow is circumventing U.S. laws against "dumping" — selling a car here for less than at home.

The Japanese deny the charge, and the Treasury Department agreed when it exonerated Toyota and Datsun in a dumping probe last year.

Even so, many here believe the Japanese do not charge a fair price for their cars. They say Japan artificially depresses the value of its currency to make its products cheaper in foreign markets.

The U.S. Big Three have not squawked too loudly about the problem, though, because they import vehicles from Japan for sale here.

"Everything ultimately comes down to price," the Ford analyst said. "In the 1960s, when the VW was cheap and sales were 60,000 a month, everyone said it was the best car around. No one talked about price, that it was hundreds of dollars less than anything we made."

"Then the price shot up $1,000 and sales fell apart. There went another myth about import quality."

But while Ford may deny the idea of elves toiling over cars in the Black Forest, the company will exploit that very myth this summer when it debuts its Fiesta minicar. The sales pitch: It's an imported car built by Ford in Germany.

Richard L. Mugg, a vice president for VW of America, says it's not myth. "We design a small car from scratch. We pay a lot of attention to detail. Detroit's small car tends to be a big car made small."

"Over the years, Detroit has never really liked small cars. It was the big car that everyone wanted. You bought a small car from Detroit when you couldn't afford to buy a big car."

Mugg believes people who want an inexpensive small car buy a Japanese model; those who want a well built small car and don't care as much about price, buy European. "Detroit's problem is that its small cars are neither very good nor very cheap," he said. "It's that horrible area in between which Detroit has chosen to occupy."

European imports are rebounding from a poor 1976.

But sales are still down from the early 1970s due to high U.S. prices caused by inflation at home and unfavorable money exchanges.

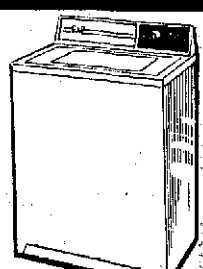

Japanese imports, however, are running wild. Their sales totaled 607,000 through May, up 74 per cent from 1976. Two of every three imports are now from Japan, which has taken a 13 per cent share of the market — the same as Chrysler and American Motors combined.

Brass Learns Silence Better Part Of Valor

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — More often than not, commencement addresses are good occasions for a nap. Lt. Gen. Donn A. Starry would have been better off if the graduating class had slept through his.

Instead, part of the audience paid attention, and he became embroiled in a new installment of the old argument over the proper boundaries of political and foreign policy comment by military officers.

Starry's indiscretions were political and diplomatic — or undiplomatic. Officially, his error was that he failed to get Pentagon clearance for the speech he made to graduates of the American High School in Frankfurt, Germany.

It didn't cost him much, just a day's inconvenience to stop by the Pentagon for a half-hour lecture from the boss. He was admonished, then sent on his way to a new job and a promotion to four-star rank.

Both were arranged before he gave the speech that stirred the trouble. He is to take charge at the Army Training and Doctrine Command, which runs the service's schools. The promotion to four stars awaits Senate confirmation.

In the offending speech, Starry told his young audience that within their lifetimes "the Soviets will fight the Chinese, possibly simply continuing their 10-year-old border conflict, but more probably in a major war." He said it is likely the United States would become involved.

He also took out after "the liberals," saying they had tried to bury God, and that they dominate a press "which is not interested in the truth, only in the 5 per cent or so of the news that deviates from the norm."

Starry thus made the 5 per cent.

His case hardly ranked with that of Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub, ordered home from South Korea after saying President Carter's planned withdrawal of U.S. ground forces would lead to war there. Singlaub contradicted the policy of his civilian commander. There isn't any policy on the issue Starry raised, although it is reasonable to assume that the United States would prefer not to see let alone become involved in a major war between Russia and China.

So the issues raised by Starry's scolding are more difficult. "If our generals are slowly silenced to the point that they cannot discuss with young people matters that do not come under announced policy of the commander in chief, then we are in for real trouble," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

But the Pentagon has told U.S. military commanders that even before policy is set, it may be contrary to the national interest for top military men to discuss it publicly.

That message went out with a reminder of the requirement that speeches and statements be submitted for advance clearance, by the Defense Department's Directorate of Security Review and Freedom of Information.

If Starry had sent his in, a Pentagon official said, it probably would have gone back to him with a letter suggesting that he reconsider the implications of his statements on war between Russia and China, and that he also consider whether he should involve himself in domestic politics with his comments about liberals.

In other words, it doesn't take a censor to make the point to a general. Over the right signature, a suggestion is enough. There's nothing new about the system, and it has caused controversy before. Fifteen years ago, a Senate investigating committee, said it was appropriate for the Pentagon to check and clear public statements in advance.

Despite the controversies over Singlaub and Starry, the Pentagon's civilian managers still are urging military men to speak to the public and to reporters. They want it done with care, and in keeping with policy, and with clearance for the speeches.

That's a tall order, but Secretary of Defense Harold Brown tells military commanders it is part of the job. It will be a difficult part, especially now that they have seen two of their colleagues' called on the administration carpet for saying the wrong things. For a while, at least, a good many top military men may decide that silence is the better part of valor.

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — Fingerprints of two Oklahoma prison escapees were found in a car belonging to one of two fishermen missing for a week, linking the convicts to a series of killings and abductions in three states.

The link was based on fingerprints found Monday in a car that belonged to one of the two Louisiana fishermen who have not been seen since June 28, five days after the convicts escaped from the maximum security prison at McAlester.

The convicts were identified as Earl Van Denton, 27, and Paul Ruiz, 29. Charges of flight to avoid prosecution were filed Monday in Hugo, Okla., against Denton, who was serving a life term for murder, and against Ruiz, who was serving life for armed robbery.

'Atlantis' Buff Pins Hopes On Pyramid In Sea

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Charles Berlitz forges on, undaunted by academic skepticism toward his theory the lost city of Atlantis may be, just may be, smack in the Bermuda Triangle.

"That has been questioned because it doesn't fit into historical perspective," said the man whose next business is pursuit of a huge object — a 500-foot, perfectly aligned pyramid — submerged in the Atlantic Ocean off Florida.

Berlitz is aware historians and archaeologists won't even consider the existence of the long-lost city of legend and literature. They would have to rewrite their books, he reasons.

"Proponents of the theory are usually considered eccentrics or visionaries," he observed in his own most recent book, "Without a Trace."

Nevertheless, this must-told explorer, described by his publisher as "one of the world's foremost experts on natural mysteries," told an audience in Mexico City in May of this huge pyramid, 500 feet high, as many feet at the base, rising from what is now the floor of the ocean.

"It was this way," Berlitz said in an interview the day before taking off on a lecture tour to South America and Europe. "Some friends were out fishing, in January, using some sonar equipment looking for banks where the fish live."

"Instead of fish," he said, "the sonar marked a straight line, sloping upward, then down again."

Berlitz traced a pyramid on the blank wall next to his desk. "They thought it was a great mountain," Berlitz went on. "Well, we went out later and zeroed in on it. It was four sloping walls, perfectly aligned, very much like the pyramids of Egypt."

"Now I haven't been down there to see if it's built of stone," he said, "but in my own opinion, it is a pyramid."

Berlitz has theorized that Egypt and parts of the Mediterranean were civilized by an Atlantic society that disappeared perhaps 12,000 years ago, quite probably immersed under water from melting glaciers. Objects that appear to be ruins of roads, walls and other structures sighted in the Atlantic off Florida add weight to that contention, Berlitz said.

Discovery of a great pyramid in the depths of the Atlantic is consistent with that theory, he said.

"The Egyptians themselves say the Great Pyramid of Khufu was built before the Great Flood," Berlitz said, "during a period they call the 'Reign of the Gods.'"

"To me, 'Reign of the Gods' means Egypt once was civilized, before recorded history, by people from outside."

Hub of that lost civilization, Berlitz said in "Without a Trace," may be Atlantis.

Berlitz wouldn't pinpoint the location of the underwater pyramid, saying only it is "out in the ocean past Florida." He said the tip is 500 to 550 feet from the surface, the base flat on the ocean bottom off the Atlantic shelf.

He said he will organize an expedition to the area in the Bermuda Triangle, perhaps late this summer, to examine the huge pyramidal object. Explorers will use submarine-like vehicles or special television equipment to examine the structure, Berlitz said.

True Fan Says U.S. Baseball Is Alive And Well

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Roger Angell peered long and lovingly at the state of baseball and pronounced the national pastime fit as ever.

No snap judgment for Angell, who's been examining the sport for The New Yorker for years. He reasoned: "We had the owners' lockout before last season, no pennant race in any of the four divisions and the biggest attendance ever."

That's not to say Angell hasn't been disturbed by big changes in the game, like artificial grass ("It distorts the game"), the designated hitter and, yes, free middle age to middle age to death. One reason we go to sports is because we want to learn to grow older gracefully, when to get out."

Angell, who collected the first of his periodic columns five years ago in "The Summer Game," has just published "Five Seasons: A Baseball Companion." The latest volume includes his reporting on baseball through last season.

At 56, Angell is a fiction editor for the New Yorker. His mother, Katherine White, was the magazine's fiction editor from its beginning through her retirement several years ago. E. B. White, the writer, is his stepfather.

Angell regularly tours baseball's spring camps before the season and spends as much time as he wants at the ballparks once play begins. He takes lots of notes but his columns are periodic, often two to three months apart. "I think what I do is something other sports writers would want to do," he said.

In addition to the report on spring training, Angell devotes a long column each year to the World Series.

His description of activity on the field and off is crisp, sharp, true to the sound, smell and color of the game. "It looks easy," he said of baseball. "But it's probably one of the hardest games to play. At least that's what the athletes tell me."

Angell said he doesn't feel "particularly impelled to do the personality piece, what is sound-so really like? I think you have to remind people the game, what they do on the field, is important."

Nevertheless, his recent article on Steve Blass, the pitcher for Pittsburgh whose arm went bad overnight, was the type of thing players themselves passed around.

Angell, who grew up in Manhattan, went to Harvard and spent some time with Holiday magazine before taking a corner office at the New Yorker in 1957, said he has little trouble keeping up his enthusiasm for baseball.

"My partially keeps shifting around," said the true fan. "I find every year if I travel around, I pick up on new teams, back to watch players I haven't seen before."

agents and their million-dollar contracts ("The owners really blew it. They were out to shatter the players' union and they lost everything").

"I think the game has receded a little bit from the fan," he mused. "Fans used to identify with the players, not in the economic way they do now but in a social way. I know I don't feel the same about a kid who's suddenly making a million and a half dollars."

But through it all, baseball has remained "one of the few great, big sports of human dimension," Angell said.

"You can watch someone in the space of 10 years go from youth to early adulthood to early

Dialogue Throws 'Em

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" may fly again. Hall Bartlett, who produced and directed the film based on Richard Bach's philosophical book, reports that the movie may be re-released in this country and England, this time with a narration instead of dialogue by the seagulls. "The film has been a major success abroad in every country except England," he said. "The major problem, both here and in England, was having the birds speak. In foreign countries where the dialogue was subtitled, there was complete acceptance." The film had a stormy release in the United States, with both composer Neil Diamond and author Bach suing Bartlett. Bartlett said he has made peace with Bach, who has written a narration for the new version.

Jackson Is Scarecrow

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Movie castings: Michael Jackson, lead singer of the Jacksons, will make his movie debut as the scarecrow in the Universal-Motown "The Wiz." Ray Bolger played the role in the 1938 "The Wizard of Oz." More second-generation castings for Robert Altman's "A Wedding," Paul Newman's Susan K. Dan O'Hertly's Cavan and Van Heflin's Marka joined the film. Also featured: Mia Farrow, daughter of Maureen O'Sullivan, and Geraldine Chaplin, daughter of Charlie. Karen Valentine makes her movie debut in Disney's "Bloodshot," playing a "spunky schoolteacher." She formerly taught school in TV's "Room 222."

More Casting For 'King'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ossie Davis, Dick Anthony Williams and Terry Alexander have been added to the cast of "King," the five-hour NBC movie based on the life of Martin Luther King, Jr. Davis will portray King Sr., Alexander will play a close associate of the civil rights leader, Bernard Lee. Williams takes the role of Medgar Evers after the withdrawal of Harry Belafonte, who had conflicting commitments. Paul Winfield is portraying the younger King, with Cicely Tyson as his wife Coretta.

Cassidy Rides Again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Cassidy rides again. Shaun Cassidy, half-brother to former teeny-bopper king David Cassidy, and son of Shirley Jones and the late Jack Cassidy, is carrying the family name to the top of the pop charts. Cassidy, the star of television's "The Hardy Boys," has a hit single "Da Do Ron Ron." In eight weeks it has climbed to the No. 2 spot on the pop charts.

Oscar Winner Turns Prof

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Oscar winner John Houseman has joined the faculty of the University of Southern California as a visiting professor of drama. The producer and actor — he was best supporting actor for his role in "The Paper Chase" — will also assist in developing programs in the performing arts.

SCENERY, HISTORY: This 154-mile circle bicycle tour between Cadillac, Manistee and Ludington combine lakes, forests, tiny villages and resort towns with a touch of Michigan history. Each town offers parks, camping facilities and a good choice of restaurants and lodging.

CADILLAC, MANISTEE, LUDINGTON

154-Mile Bike Tour Steeped In History

A 154-mile circle bicycle tour linking Cadillac, Manistee and Ludington offers slow-paced, scenic views of lakes, forests and northern Michigan farm country, according to Automobile Club of Michigan.

The towns along the way are steeped in history. Manistee is an Indian word for "spirit of the woods." Cadillac is named for an early French explorer, and a huge cross atop a high hill at Ludington marks the spot where pioneer explorer Pere Marquette died in 1673.

Since the trip is long, bicyclists may decide to tackle it in sections. One 60-mile segment travels between Cadillac and Manistee. A 27-mile stretch from Manistee to Ludington is partly along Lake Michigan's shore, and the last lap stretches inland for 67 miles from Ludington to Cadillac.

Each section offers views of lakes and some of the state's finest scenery. There also are inns and lodges for overnight stops, plus restaurants. Three state parks en route can accommodate outdoor line. The State Fish Hatchery at Harrietta, open daily from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., raises rainbow trout for Great Lakes plantings. Hodgepyle and Tippy dams on Ludington.

Just above Ludington, M-116 leads north into Ludington state park, with three miles of sandy beach on Lake Michigan and four miles along Hamlin lake. The 4,000-acre park has 44 campsites and miles of foot trails. The only marked bike trail on this tour leads eight miles along Lake Michigan, from Ludington into the state park.

To reach Cadillac, reverse the Hamlin route followed into Ludington from Styles Road and head east 10 miles on Fountain Road to the village of Fountain.

an old-fashioned hamlet among rolling hills studded with dairy farms.

The unpaved extension of Fountain road winding around Ford Lake to Millerton Road through dense forests and past cottages is one of the most scenic segments of the tour. That seven-mile stretch is the only unpaved road on the entire tour, but it is hard-packed and well-graded.

Turn north off Millerton road on Hamilton road, which connects with Old M-63. That highway passes through the Marquette state forest. Follow Old M-63 and Skookum and Bristol roads to connect with US-131 into downtown Cadillac. There is a rest area on US-131 near the junction of M-115.

At Cadillac, 32-acre William Mitchell state park has wooded areas, sandy beaches on Lakes Cadillac and Mitchell and good fishing. Cadillac's Kenwood Heritage park is on Lake Cadillac.

Bicyclists should pace themselves according to their ability. The League of American Wheelmen estimates the average bicyclist can cover 30 to 50 miles a day with ease.

Seventh In A Series

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh in a series of 15 weekly articles on bicycle touring through Michigan. The series is designed to encourage Michigan tourism and promote bicycling near population centers.

The trip from Cadillac to Manistee winds along M-55 to M-115, which heads north past Lake Mitchell and William Mitchell state park. Watch for Boon Road. A sign directs travelers west on Boon road to the villages of Boon and Harrietta. Boon road becomes Coates Highway after crossing the Wexford-Manistee county the Manistee river also are points of interest.

Coates highway, a tree-lined road through rolling hills, joins US-31 (Chippewa highway) 29 miles west of the hatchery. M-110, seven miles southwest of that junction, leads north off US-31 to Orchard Beach state park, a 201-acre facility with 180 campsites located on a high bluff overlooking Lake Michigan. The park is two miles north of Manistee.

Manistee is flanked by Lake Manistee and Lake Michigan. First Street Beach park on Lake Michigan has picnic tables and grills as well as comfort facilities. The Old Water Works building on First street has early lumbering days exhibits and the Russell Memorial Museum offers pioneer exhibits.

If leaving Manistee for Ludington, turn right one block off US-31 on any downtown street to Maple street. Head south six miles on Maple street to County Line road and go right one block to Quarter Line road, then south six miles to Town Line road and jog right to Stiles street.

Follow Stiles, Fountain and Angling roads and Dewey street through the trees and past Hamlin lake to Lake Shore road for a pleasant, seven-mile ride along Lake Michigan into

Old Tires Can Be Beautiful

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cecil Heidelberg takes the view that mounds of "old tires are no more unsightly than clothes on a line." The 8 million tires Heidelberg has bought for 10 cents apiece cover 10 acres and are stacked as high as 40 feet on his property outside St. Paul, Minn.

Even if one disagrees with Heidelberg's assessment, worn-out tires can be beautiful, less for their appearance than for their use. The recycling of tires, in fact, preoccupies not only junk-tire collectors like Heidelberg but also the whole rubber industry. Old tires can be used for landfill, shredded and used as a fuel additive or as an asphalt binder. Tires can be used as artificial reefs or as breakwaters. Pilot projects are under way to determine a cheap way of retrieving oil, carbon black and steel from scrap tires.

Heidelberg, for instance, is buying a tire shredder to cut old tires into 1-inch bites. The B&H Wholesale Tire Co., of Oklahoma City, which is providing the shredder, will then sell the shredded rubber mainly to industries which add the rubber chips to coal. Rubber has a higher BTU content than coal and makes a good fuel additive. The impetus for such interest in recycled tires came from the federal Clean Air Act of 1970, which brought a virtual end to open burning of tires.

The rubber industry estimates that at least 175 million tires are thrown away each year. Because rubber does not decompose, it was a challenge to think up new ways to use old tires, beyond shredding them or simply using them as landfill.

At Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., that challenge fell on research engineer Richard Candler. During a 1968 corporate meeting, Candler bravely announced to a company executive that he could come up with 100 uses for scrap tires. "He said I COULDN'T," Candler recalled. "I came up with a list of 101."

At Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., alone, about 2 million tires have been banded together to form an artificial reef which attracts fish and plant life just like the natural reefs do. In a similar project, Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. is donating tires from its Albany, Ga., plant for an artificial reef off Brunswick, Ga. Within five years, the Georgia Game and Fish Commission hopes to install 100 acres of reefs.

Cubs Drop Two; Lead Shrinks To Four

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

It often is said that the whoever is in first place on July 4 will win the pennant. That may have been the only comfort the Chicago Cubs got on Independence Day.

The Cubs dropped a doubleheader to the Montreal Expos Monday, 19-3 and 7-6, and saw their first-place lead shrink to four games over Philadelphia in the National League's East Division. The Cubs have lost six of their last seven games.

Montreal's first-game explosion was led by Ellis Valentine and Andre Dawson, each of whom drove in five runs. Meanwhile, Warren Cromartie had five hits, including three doubles.

Chicago outfielder-first baseman Larry Bittner made his major league pitching debut in the eighth inning of the game. Bittner came on with two men on base and was bombed for three homers, six runs and five hits in 1 1/3 innings.

"I was as surprised as anyone," said Bittner of Cubs Manager Herman Franks' decision to bring him on to pitch, even though Chicago trailed 11-2 at the time. "But I'll do it again if they want me to."

"I used him because I didn't have anyone else," said Franks, who was drawn out of the game in the ninth when he argued with plate umpire Terry Tafa about an alleged baseball thrown by Bittner to Del Unser. "We have nine games in seven days. What did you expect me to do in a spot like that, bring in Bruce Sutter?"

Sutter is the Cubs' ace reliever.

Montreal captured the nightcap as Sam Mejias doubled, tripled and homered, driving in two runs and scoring three.

Mejias tripled in a three-run first inning, doubled off relief ace Bruce Sutter to break a 4-4 tie in the seventh and homered in the ninth. Jerry Morales had two doubles and Del Unser a two-run homer.

The victory was the sixth in a row for the rejuvenated Expos and Williams.

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia beat New York 3-1; Pittsburgh swept a pair from St. Louis, 5-2 and 4-3;

Los Angeles blanked San Francisco 4-0, handing the Giants their seventh consecutive loss; Atlanta edged Cincinnati 5-4, and Houston outscored San Diego, 12-7.

Philadelphia won its fifth straight game before the largest crowd in the majors this season, 63,283. Jim Lonzberg, 22, and Ron Reed combined on a six-hitter and Ollie Brown keyed a three-run third inning off Mets' starter Jerry Koosman, 6-9.

On his 38th birthday, a local bakery gave Chuck Tanner a cake the size of the batter's box. Then the Pirates gave Tanner a better present with their doubleheader sweep of St. Louis.

"The Pirates' opening-game victory ended a four-game losing string as Omar Moreno belted his fourth homer of the season and drove in three runs. Rich Gossage picked up his 14th save with 2 2/3 innings of hitless relief.

Dave Parker won the second game with a leadoff homer in the ninth inning, blasting a changeup by St. Louis reliever Rawly Eastwick far over the right-field wall.

Don Sutton pitched a three-hitter and Ron Cey collected three singles and two RBI to pace Los Angeles.

Diff Pomeroy's three-run double with two out in the eighth inning gave the Braves their victory over the Cardinals.

Phil Niekro, 8-9, picked up his eighth win in his last 10 decisions after an 0-7 start.

Jose Cruz drove in four runs with a single and two homers to spur Houston over San Diego.

DOWNED BIRD: Detroit Tigers' pitcher Mark "The Bird" Fidrych huris his glove into the Detroit dugout after the Baltimore Orioles jumped on him during a six-run sixth inning. The Orioles won 6-4 and ended a six-game winning streak for the Bird. (AP Wirephoto)

Victim Of 4th Of July Explosion Birds Bang 'Bird'

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mark "The Bird" Fidrych was appreciative, angry, an impish needer ... and the losing pitcher.

A bit off form with both his throwing and his antics, the Detroit right-hander dropped a 6-4 decision to the Baltimore Orioles Monday before 45,339, the largest Independence Day crowd in Baltimore history.

A six-run sixth inning rally brought a sudden halt to The Bird's first Baltimore appearance ever, and he left the mound torn by two emotions.

The crowd, which seldom cheers a departing pitcher, gave Fidrych a warm round of applause which mounted as he twice lifted the cap off his early locks. But then he slammed his glove into the dugout, and a round of boos followed.

"I wanted to show my gratification toward them," Fidrych said of his cap doffing, and then added with a grin: "They probably never had that many people in the park before. Every time I've been here, they've been lucky to have 10,000."

As for underhanded glove toss into the dugout, he said: "That was probably the hardest I threw all night."

Tigers Manager Ralph Houk was philosophical. "I guess he had one counting; he's been going so well... He's a real competitor."

The Orioles, who have a 3-1 career edge over Fidrych, agreed that Fidrych didn't have his usual stuff and didn't keep the ball down as much as usual.

"In batting practice we kept pulling our caps down to remind ourselves that the pitches would be low," said Baltimore shortstop Mark Belanger. "But almost every pitch to me was up."

Belanger had two of the 10 hits off Fidrych — who is 4-3 after having a six-game winning streak snapped — including a two-run double in the sixth which overcame a 2-0 Detroit lead.

Fidrych, who did none of the jumping around or putting of the dirt which has done as much for his popularity as his pitching, was working on a four-hitter when a single by Ken Singleton launched the rally with two outs.

ookie Eddie Murray then cracked his 11th homer to tie the score 2-2 and after Lee May doubled, Detroit Manager Ralph Houk ordered an intentional walk for Doug DeCinces.

Fidrych admitted later that he called time to ask catcher Bruce Kimm why the walk was ordered, not realizing that May had reached second base.

"You should always find out what's going on," he said. "Then I understood the strategy ... but the strategy didn't work."

Rick Dempsey hit the next pitch to drive in May, and then Belanger steered a double into the right field corner on a run-and-hit pitch, sending two more runs home. Al Dunbar followed with an RBI single, finishing Fidrych.

"I was looking for a fast ball," said Dempsey of his tiebreaking hit. "I took first ball first pitches the other two times, and I figured he wanted to get ahead of me after the walk. I was 99 percent sure it would be a fast ball."

Rudy May, 10-7, gave up two solo homers to John Wockenuff and one to Rusty Staub, departing in favor of Tippy Martinez after Wockenuff opened the ninth with his second circuit clinch.

May hit a pinch single with one out and then Tony Muser, an eighth inning defensive replacement at first base for Lee May, made a spectacular diving catch of pinch hitter Ben Oglivie's liner and crawled to the bag for a game-ending double play.

"I couldn't see the bag," Muser said. "My cap was in my face."

Shoe Beats Slew, Loses On Forego

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thoroughbred racing presented its two biggest sparklers over the Fourth of July weekend — Forego and Seattle Slew.

Forego fizzled. Seattle Slew never ignited at all.

The failure of both provided the high and low of the holiday period for Bill Shoemaker.

Shoemaker was aboard J.O. Tobin when that 3-year-old colt romped to an eight-length victory in the $300,000 Swaps Stakes Sunday at Hollywood Park as Seattle Slew finished fourth for the first defeat in the Triple Crown champion's 10-race career.

The Shoe also was in the saddle Monday when Forego, Martha Gerry's Horse of the Year the past three years, tried to win the $100,400 Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park and ended up a neck short of Quiet Little Table at the finish.

"He tried his best, but the top weight and the fact that he was getting tired caused him to drift out badly," said Shoemaker who made up 95 of the personal high of 138 pounds Forego was asked to carry. "He tried his best."

Indeed he did. But Forego, who has been worst than third five times in 52 starts, lost any chance of catching Quiet Little Table, 11-4, when he drifted extremely wide in the final eighth of a mile, although he did overtake pacesetter Nearly On Time who finished third under only 104 pounds.

Quiet Little Table, owned by Meadowhill and ridden by Eddie Maple, ran the 1 1/4 miles in 2:03 and paid a winning mutual of $19.80.

"He just wasn't himself today — at least in the race," Jean Crugnet said of Seattle Slew's performance, in which Karen Taylor's colt finished 16 lengths behind the winner. "...He just didn't fire."

"We tried to carry the impossible dream one act too much," said the Slew's trainer Billy Turner, who was back at Belmont Park Monday morning. "I let my enthusiasm for Seattle Slew's ability set aside my thoughts that running a horse right back after winning the Triple Crown is the wrong thing to do."

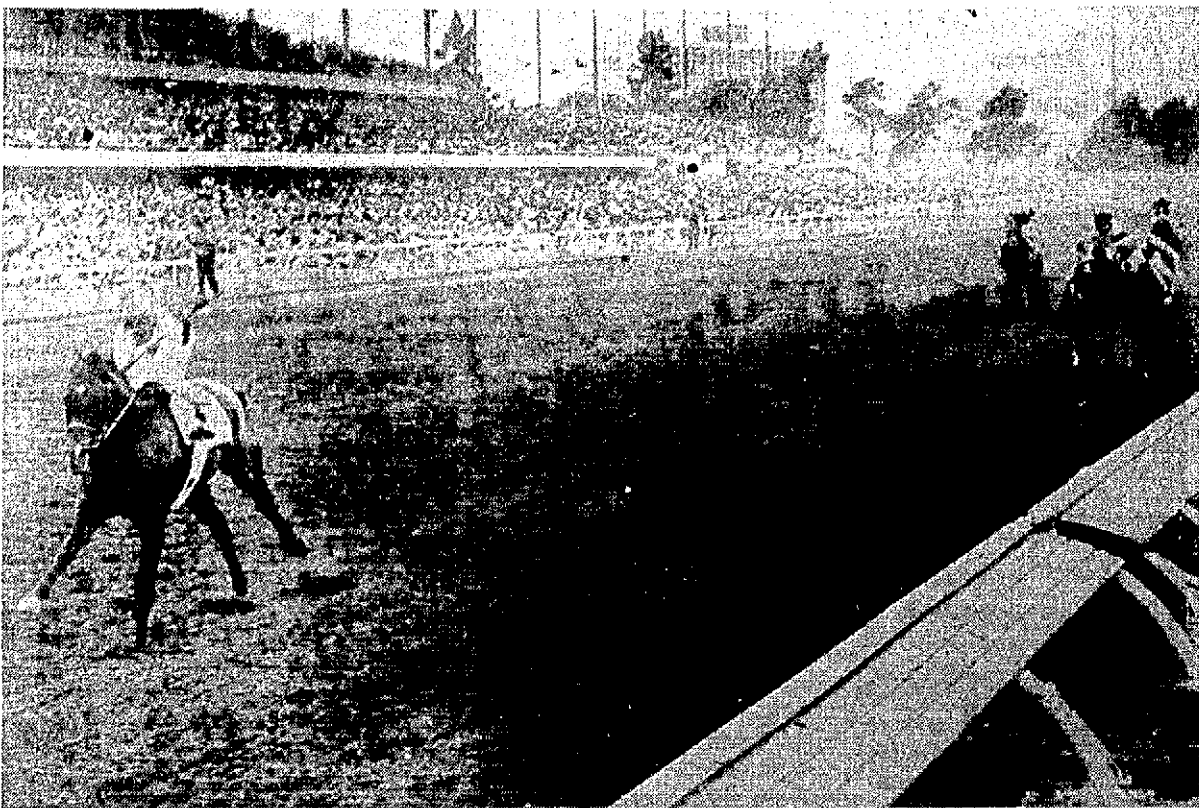

"Now I guess we're going to have to rise from the rubble... We will."

In the Swaps, George A. Pope's J.O. Tobin rose to the occasion. He broke on top and stayed there, completing the 1 1/4 miles in a stakes record of 1:58.3-5 under 129 pounds, six less than Seattle Slew carried. Affiliante finished second, a nose ahead of Test.

J.O. Tobin, a proven grass runner who failed in two previous attempts on the dirt, including a fifth place in the Preakness, paid $8.20 and earned $194,900.

Crugnet, who had finished second in the $109,800 Coaching Club American Oaks at Belmont Saturday before flying west for the Slew's upset, got some solace Monday at Hollywood Park by winning the $113,000 American Handicap on Hunza Dancer.

Crugnet sent Hunza Dancer past Anne's Pretender and Legendaire with a closing rush that brought a nose victory over Anne's Pretender. Legendaire was another neck back at the end of the 1 1/4 miles on the grass.

Boston Rips Eight Homers To Snap Losing String

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Red Sox are starting to sound like a broken record ... and continuing to look like record-breakers.

The home run-happy Red Sox have been hitting baseballs into the seats with fatiguing consistency all season long — N Monday fanned eight more in a 9-4 decision over the Toronto Blue Jays.

"It's like a disease around here," said George Scott, biggest of the Boston boomers. "One guy gets home run fever — and every one else catches it."

Scott hit two of the homers to bring his season's total to 23. Fred Lynn added a pair for the Red Sox, while Butch Hobson, Berdie Carbo, Jim Rice and Carl Yastrzemski hit one each.

The explosion brought Boston's total for the season to 118 in 76 games and set them on a possible record-breaking course for season homers by a team. The New York Yankees hold the mark with 240 in 1961.

Meanwhile, the Red Sox set a major league record by hitting five or more home runs for the seventh time this season. The eight homers made the Red Sox the sixth team to reach the major-league record number.

Boston Manager Don Zimmer was impressed by the feat, but more impressed by the victory. It was the first by his team in 10 games.

"It's just fun to win a game," said Zimmer. "It was a long time coming. We needed something to break us out of this mess and we certainly got it with the ball flying out of here."

In other American League games, the California Angels defeated the Oakland A's 4-2; the Chicago White Sox turned back the Seattle Mariners 6-2; the Kansas City Royals edged the Texas Rangers 1-0; the New York Yankees outscored the Cleveland Indians 7-5; the Baltimore Orioles tripped the Detroit Tigers 6-4 and the Minnesota Twins blanked the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-0.

Nolan Ryan struck out 11 batters to tie a Sandy Koufax record, and rookie shortstop Rance Mulliniks drove in three runs with a homer and two singles, leading California over Oakland.

Ryan's 10th strikeout of the game, recorded against Marty Perez in the seventh inning, marked the 97th game in which the right-hander had notched 10 or more strikeouts, equalling Koufax's major league record.

Toni Poquette slugged a two-out, run-scoring single in the fifth and Jim Colborn and Mark Littell combined on a seven-hit, as Kansas City nipped Texas before a sellout crowd of 34,660.

Loser Gaylord Perry, 7-7, yielded eight scattered hits in a complete-game performance for the Rangers.

Chris Chambliss, Roy White and Graig Nettles socked second-inning home runs, helping Ed Figueroa win his first game in over a month as New York defeated Cleveland.

Mike Cuddage drove in four runs and Paul Thormodsgard hurled a five-hitter as Minnesota beat Milwaukee. The Twins scored all the runs they needed with a four-run fourth off Milwaukee starter Larry Sorensen, 2-2.

Minnesota's Rod Carew, the major league's leading hitter, was 0-for-3 and his batting average dropped to .403.

Petty Champion Of Firecracker

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "Old blue was flying, said Darrell Waltrip. "I was running after him, but there was no way anybody was gonna catch him."

Old Blue is Richard Petty, winner for the seventh time in major stock car races at Daytona International Speedway when he beat Waltrip by 17.7 seconds in the rain-interrupted Firecracker 400-mile Monday.

"We weren't the fastest, but we were the quickest," Petty said. "I mean the quickest getting back to the finish line. Some of those cars that go fast down the straights don't do as well in the corners."

The money incentive is still there for the six-time national stock car champion on the Auto Racing (NASCAR) grand national circuit.

It wasn't only the $23,075 Petty won in the race, but the fact that it pulled him within 17 points of defending national champion Cale Yarborough in this year's race. Yarborough had mechanical trouble and had to settle for 24th place.

Petty was leading after 205 miles, when the race was halted for hours by rain. Twenty three laps under caution to dry the track slowed the winner's speed to 142.716 miles an hour.

Petty left behind the Chevrolet of Waltrip and third-place Benny Parsons as well as David Pearson's fourth-place Mercury.

A. J. Foyt, a contender in his Chevrolet until his final pit stop, was fifth.

Three women drivers started in the 41-car field but none was running at the finish. Janet Guthrie, who had 12th and 15th place finishes here in other races, ran only 11 laps before her engine failed. She finished 40th. Christine Beekers of Belgium went out with a loss of brakes after 33 laps and was 37th. Lella Lombardi of Italy fought handling problems for 103 laps before retiring in 31st place.

MY DADDY, THE WINNER: That's what Becky Petty could be saying about her father, Richard, who's holding his trophy in victory lane Monday after he won the Firecracker 400 race at the Daytona Speedway. (AP Wirephoto)

NMU Joins New Mid-Continent League

MARQUETTE — Northern Michigan University and five other NCAA Division II universities have officially formed the Mid-Continent Athletic Association and will begin competition in football, basketball and four other sports in the 1978-79 academic year.

Joining Northern as charter members of the Mid-Continent Athletic Association (MCAA) are Akron, Eastern Illinois, Northern Iowa, Western Illinois and Youngstown State.

Northern has held membership in the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Association (GLIAC), a league of Michigan schools with a variety of national affiliations, since 1975.

"The GLIAC recently enacted legislation to require each member institution to affiliate with the NAIA, a move not endorsed by Northern's President John X. Jamrich.

"We struggled with the problems of dual NAIA and NCAA affiliation in the past," explained Dr. Jamrich, "and this is a route we do not wish to follow again."

Northern was affiliated with the NAIA until early 1968 when the University held dual membership in both the NAIA and NCAA before becoming affiliated exclusively with the NCAA in the summer of that year.

Northern will also compete in swimming, wrestling and tennis, in addition to football and basketball. NMU must also add one sport from among cross country, golf or track and field to meet minimum conference standards. Except for football and basketball, league championships will be decided on the basis of a single championship meet.

Eichelberger 'Home Free'

OUT FOR YEAR? Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres, who won the 1976 Cy Young Award, may not pitch again this season according to Dr. Paul Bauer, the team's physician. Jones underwent surgery on his arm last October and the doctor feels he may need this year to get over the operation. (AP Wirephoto)

MILWAUKEE (AP) — It was a $26,000 paycheck for a long weekend of work, and Dave Eichelberger had no doubts what to do with his winnings from the Greater Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

"We're going to buy a house in Fort Worth," he said after pocketing the tournament's top prize. "We need the room. If I didn't win here, we'd just have to scrape some more."

Eichelberger, who also won the Milwaukee tournament in 1971, had been tied for second place entering Sunday's 36-hole final of this year's event. The tourney had been delayed a day by rain last Thursday and was temporarily stalled by rain Sunday morning.

However, the 33-year-old Eichelberger, recovering from bogeys on his 25th and 26th holes, used three birdies in his last nine holes to notch a closing 70. That was two under par over the windy, wet Tuckaway Country Club course.

He finished with a 10 under, 278 total, two strokes ahead of Morris Hatafsky, Gary McCord and Mike Murley.

The $300,000 Milwaukee tournament was skipped, as usual, by most of the tour's top names who elected instead to prepare for this week's British Open.

Henry Cotton Recalls British Open 50 Years Ago

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Henry Cotton can remember his first British Open 50 years ago as if it were yesterday, and the recollections, he says, sends shivers up his spine.

"It was at St. Andrews in 1927," recalled England's 70-year-old fairway patriarch, preparing to tee off in the 106th championship Wednesday. "The experience was a harrowing one."

"Bob Jones was heavily favored and an idol of the Scots. You know how it is at St. Andrews — double greens and parallel fairways. Well, on the final day when two 18-hole rounds were played, it was impossible for the other golfers on the course."

"The fans went wild, swarming over the adjacent fairways where other players were trying to make their shots and sitting down on the other half of the greens."

Cotton, whose career has spanned the generations from the immortal Harry Vardon to Jack Nicklaus, is amused at the affluence and high public esteem held by the modern tournament professional.

"For many of those early years, the professional was looked upon as little more than a lackey and held in disdain by the club members," he recalled.

This class distinction continued through the career of the late Bob Jones, an amateur, and into the 1930s before being broken through by the resistance of Cotton and the flamboyant Walter Hagen.

"I'll never forget 1930 when Jones came to Hoylake in pursuit of his Grand Slam," Cotton said. "He was accompanied by Leo Diegel, a professional. After a practice round, Jones was swept into the upstairs trophy room by exuberant admirers."

"He looked around and said, 'Where's Leo?' 'Sorry, Mr. Jones,' he was told. 'Professionals are not allowed in here.' So Jones took his drink plus one for Diegel and the two sat on the front steps to finish them."

Forbidden entrance to the club house, Hagen ordered a limousine to the front door with chauffeur and footman and dressed in the car.

"Others of us began dressing in our cars," Cotton said. "But club members resented our having cars and we had to hide them behind bushes. Americans, however, were allowed to park near the club house. In 1931, when I won for the first time at St.

George's, I finally was permitted to park next to Gene Sarazen's car."

Cotton won again in 1937 and 1948 — three Opens — and shortly afterward announced one of his periodic retirements.

"I planned a comeback for 1953 at Carnoustie," he said. "I worked hard for three months. Then one day the fairway started weaving before me. I was hospitalized with a heart attack. It was Ben Hogan's Open, the only one I haven't seen in 50 years."

The great English star staged another comeback but last December underwent two operations, had pneumonia, suffered blood clots in his lungs and legs and barely survived.

He has played only eight rounds since but could not resist the invitation to Turnberry. "This is the silver jubilee for the queen," he said. "The golden jubilee for me."

Borg Sets Sights On Connors, Open

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Bjorn Borg, the blond tennis ace from Sweden, has set his sights on becoming the fourth man to win more than two men's singles titles at historic Wimbledon.

But first he wants another crack at Jimmy Connors at the U.S. Open in September.

Borg beat Connors, the Belleville, Ill., whiz who had been considered the No. 1 ranking player in the world, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1, 5-7, 6-4 Saturday to win his second straight Wimbledon crown.

"I want to win Wimbledon again," said the broad-shouldered 21-year-old Scandinavian with the 80-pound tangles in his racket strings.

If he does win again next year, he would be only the second man to capture three consecutive Wimbledon singles titles in the last 50 years. Fred Perry of England did it in the 1930s.

Australian John Newcombe also has three Wimbledon singles titles, but only two in succession.

Rod Laver of Australia is the only man to win four singles championships at Wimbledon in the past half-century.

"I am not scared any more," Borg said after beating Connors here. "I am more mentally tough. Now I know I can come back. I have confidence I can win."

Borg lost to Connors in the finals of the U.S. Open at Forest Hills last fall. If he wins there this year, the Swede will be the third man in the past decade to win the Wimbledon and Forest Hills titles the same year. Laver won both in 1969 and Connors in 1974.

The only American to win at the century Wimbledon tournament was JoAnne Russell of Miami Beach, Fla., who captured a share of the women's doubles crown with Australian Helen Gourlay Cawley.

Nicklaus Again Heavily Favored

TURNBERRY, Scotland (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, superstar of the British open golf championships for 15 years, is heavily favored to win it again over one of Scotland's wildest and windiest courses.

The bookies rated him an 11-2 shot for the tournament starting Wednesday over Turnberry's 6,975-yard Ailsa course beside the Firth of Clyde.

Since 1962, Nicklaus has won the British Open twice, been runnerup five times and placed third three times.

The 117-year-old tournament, which is alternated among eight of Britain's ancient courses, is being played at Turnberry for the first time. If the wind blows, it could turn into a nightmare.

"I played here once in a tournament in 1973," said Johnny Miller, the defending champion. "It was horrendous weather, even by Scottish standards."

The ninth tee, out on a windswept promontory beside a lighthouse, is the most notorious on any British links. The players have to drive from a tiny patch of ground, with waves breaking over the rocks right beneath them.

He started this year badly but his form has been picking up lately.

"I won't pretend I'm optimistic," Miller said. "But in fact I'm playing better now than at this time last year. I was not playing well going into last year's British Open."

Next after Nicklaus in the bookies' list are Tom Weiskopf 10-1; Tom Watson, winner of his last two tournaments, 12-1, and Ben Crenshaw 14-1.

Miller is rated a 16-1 shot, along with Hale Irwin and Hubert Green, winner of the U.S. Open.

Mad Tackle

CHICAGO, Mont. (AP) — Atlanta defensive tackle Mike Tilden says he will not play football this season unless the Falcons trade him to another National Football League club.

Tilden, a 280-pound former University of Montana star, said he is disenchanted with the Falcons because the organization's priorities come before the players.

Detroit Cagers Tourney Champ

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The Detroit All-Stars returned home Monday with a championship in the national AAU Junior Basketball Tournament.

Led by Jay Vincent with 26 points and 14 rebounds and Earvin Johnson with 25, Detroit overtook North Florida in the final two minutes of Sunday's title match and went on to win, 96-80.

Johnson, a former Lansing Everett star, was named the tourney's most valuable player.

In the consolation game, Seattle held off Florida Gold Coast, 106-104.

Sports Halls Of Fame Growing In America

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sports halls of fame keep proliferating.

Soon it won't be surprising to see a hall of fame honoring left-handed Frisbee throwers of Liechtenstein descent.

There isn't really anything wrong with that. So what if there is a sports hall of fame to single out Polish-Americans, or black Americans, or anyone else?

Athletes usually become our biggest heroes. We need heroes. So why not honor them in various halls of fame before they fade into the recesses of our grandparents' memories?

Ethnic pride means a lot.

Stan Musial is in the baseball Hall of Fame. That makes Polish-Americans proud.

Many people probably didn't have any idea Musial was of Polish extraction. But since he was also inducted into the Polish-American Sports Hall of Fame, his ethnic heritage is emphasized and his membership becomes a point of pride in Polish-Americans.

There are many more Polish-American athletes who would never be inducted into one of the bigger fame halls. They are athletes who were outstanding in their day, but who would be nearly forgotten had they not been elected to the Polish-American Sports Hall of Fame.

Many colleges have sports halls of fame. Jim Northrup, for instance, probably will never make it to the baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., but he was one of the greatest athletes ever at Alma College. Appropriately, he's in the Alma Sports Hall of Fame.

Generally, halls of fame include museums with memorabilia connected with the honored athletes. Bronze plaques telling of the feats of the inductees usually adorn the walls.

There is an Association of Sports Museums and Halls of Fame.

"There are about 32 halls that are members," explained Bruce Pluckhahn, a director of the association. "And there are about as many that don't belong."

What benefits do organization members receive?

"We share information on everything from taxes and insurance to admission policies and general operational problems," said Pluckhahn. In Detroit recently for the induction of basketball's Tom Gola and football's Bill Osinski into the Polish-American Sports Hall of Fame.

Pluckhahn said there will be a hall of fame convention in October at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., site of a swimming hall of fame.

The National Bowling Hall of Fame and Museum near Milwaukee is housed in the headquarters of the American Bowling Congress and the Women's International Bowling Congress. Its quarters are cramped and a new location is being sought.

Pluckhahn said a site in Dearborn, Mich., is being given strong consideration. The Detroit metropolitan area may be the biggest hotbed of bowling in the country.

A hall of fame can be a tourist bonanza for an area. That's why Little Rock, Ark., has offered any one of 12 sites for a bowling hall of fame — free, Pluckhahn said.

The National Football League Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio, draws a quarter million people a year, he said, after starting out with 40,000.

Denny McLain Files Bankruptcy Petition

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Denny McLain, the last pitcher in major league baseball to win more than 30 games, has filed a personal bankruptcy petition listing debts at more than $1 million.

McLain, 33, claims only $800 in assets.

The petition, filed last week in U.S. District Court at Memphis, said the former star of the Detroit Tigers, had $300 cash on hand, household goods worth $500 and books, pictures and belongings worth $100.

McLain lost his job as general manager of the now-defunct Memphis Blues minor league baseball club last year. He has worked as an advertising account executive for William B.

Tanner Co. since September when he was deposited in a Blues shakeup.

McLain, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1968 when he won 41 games, came to Memphis in 1975.

His bankruptcy petition listed a $500,000 debt to HCB Investments Co. in St. Clair, Mich., a $350,000 debt to Campbell, Dickey Marketing Co. in Southfield, Mich., and a $400,000 debt to the Internal Revenue Service.

Former Athletes Finding New Careers As Actors

NEW YORK (AP) — The scene was set: 15 men, many of them very large, were crammed together like sardines in a room. They stood under bright lights before a camera which had worked for three hours to film enough footage for a 60-second beer commercial.

Ben Davidson, the former defensive lineman for the Oakland Raiders, put a massive hand over the bald head of Ray Nitschke. "That glare is getting to me," he told the ex-Green Bay Packers linebacker.

Meanwhile, Mandy Rudolph stood on an orange crate that would help his height. Though he labored for years in a big man's sport as a basketball referee, Rudolph stands well under six feet tall; surrounded by former football players and Boston Celtics head coach Tommy Heinsohn, the camera would never have seen his face but for the assistance of the box.

The director, like a dentist telling a patient that the drilling was nearly done, told his actors that this take would be "the last one. I promise."

So, for the 40th time, the men went through their roles, arguing the merits of the brew with one-third less calories than regular beer. Another day, another dollar for a crew which has found life profitable despite the fact that, for all but a few, their athletic careers had ended long ago.

"I always thought I was going to be in football all my life," recalls former Chicago Bears linebacker Dick Butkus. "But my knee went out on me and it dawned on me — 'Hey! I'm out of football.' Sometimes things happen for the best. I could have wound up as just another coach somewhere."

Instead, Butkus is a full-time actor. He, Davidson and a number of others have traded in their membership cards with the National Football League Players Association for one emblazoned "Screen Actors Guild."

Earlier, Butkus reeled off an impressive list of acting credits: MacMillan and Wife, Police Story, Rockford Files, Mother, Jugs and Speed, not to mention commercials like the one being filmed when he spoke. He said one commercial, in which he had to lift four air conditioners, "almost cut my darn arms off. Those things were heavy."

The same was true for Davidson who, though one of football's leading nasties during his playing years, has found a gold mine in the silver screen.

"I started with a bit role in the movie M-A-S-H, had a bit part in 'Harry and Walter Go To New York,' and then I got a call from a guy who was producing the TV series of 'Ball Four.' They needed a big guy to play the catcher on the team."

"That's what I'm doing now. My agent calls me and I go to Los Angeles," said Davidson. "But then, I never had a real job. I played a kid's game for 18 years, got a free education out of it, and now I'm doing this."

Meanwhile, there was work to be done.

"You still don't know anything about beer," glared Heinsohn, humming over Rudolph's shoulder as the cameras rolled. "I thought I threw you out of this bar last year," retorted the former referee.

"I feel very strongly both ways, and I don't argue," added Billy Martin, who as manager of the New York Yankees "often finds himself in that position."

And so on. Matt Snell beamed and extolled the beer's low-calorie composition. "Tastes great, Matthew," added Bubba Smith, all sweetness and light though he ate quarterback for a living not that long ago.

"Actually, there are a lot of similarities between being an athlete and an actor," Davidson explained. "We're used to taking direction from a coach. We're used to trying to please a guy. We're used to pressure situations where you've got to perform."

The list of athlete-actors grows daily. Davidson volunteered an opinion that the Raiders have more ex-players in show business than any other football team.

Linebacker Carl Weathers played the heavyweight champion who fought "Rocky." Fred Williamson went into pictures and a brief, unsuccessful stint as color man for ABC's Monday Night Football telecasts. Current Oakland lineman Otis Sistrunk had a part in "Car Wash," and defensive back Pervis Atkins played in "The Longest Yard" with Burt Reynolds.

Snell, meanwhile, has extended his income by lending his endorsement to the beer and off-track betting in New York.

It was Davidson who put it most bluntly. "I just thought, 'It's there, why not exploit it?'"

The exploitation goes both ways. Using mostly former athletes for their advertising campaign, the Miller Brewing Co. sold 5½ million barrels of its product last year, a lot of beer, to say the least.

That in turn, Davidson took his place on the crowded set and drank one of the props.

Butkus, former Oakland Raider Ben Davidson, former New York Mets Marv Throneberry, former basketball referee Mandy Rudolph, and Boston Celtics head coach Tommy Heinsohn. They were filming a commercial for Miller's Lite Beer. (AP Wirephoto)

Michigan Continues Big Restoration Of Stadium

ANN ARBOR — Mammoth Michigan Stadium celebrates its Golden Anniversary year this season, looking more like a bride than a 50-year-old mother who has hosted some of the greatest spectacles in college football history.

And the reason for this look of youth is a $1.3 billion face-lift job by the building trades, electricians, plumbers, concrete and asphalt people that continues each summer. Michigan athletic director Don Canham, has programmed this 10-year project because, "It would be impossible to replace the greatest football stadium ever built."

This summer, for example, the main projects are restroom renovations that will double the facilities available for women and concrete restorations of the stands.

Michigan fans who sit in sections 35 through 38 will find all the comfort in their sections completely restored. Total cement work this summer has been budgeted at $145,000 and increases the number of sections that have been restored to

22. Twelve restrooms are being completely renovated at a cost of $180,000. These include six on the west side of the stadium and two each on the north, south and east sides. Eight more restrooms remain to be renovated. Additionally, an asphalt resurfacing project is scheduled to be completed this summer and the parking lot southeast of Crisler Arena blacktopped, all part of the $350,000 being spent to upgrade the 101,700-seat stadium.

Improvements in the stadium began in 1969 with the installation of an artificial surface. A year later twin electric scoreboards were added. The playing field was replaced by another artificial surface in 1975 and every seat in the stadium was covered by a special paint in 1976.

Michigan Stadium cost slightly less than $1 million to build in 1927 when athletic director Fielding H. Yost financed the construction by selling $500 bonds. Athletic director Fritz Crisler had the stadium remodeled in 1959, replacing the "temporary" bleachers Yost had installed in 1927 with steel stands which boosted the capacity from 85,000 to 107,200.

Another face-lifting project was accomplished under Crisler in 1956 when a new communications center was erected and the seating again increased, this time to 101,001. Replacing box seats with bleacher seats in 1973 gave the stadium its present capacity of 101,701.

A total of 18,392,553 fans have watched the Wolverines in Michigan stadium since the gates were first opened 50 years ago.

Miss Rankin Wins Despite Bad Putts

QUITE, Que. (AP) — The experts say you have to putt well to win in golf, but Judy Rankin proved that isn't necessarily so in the only Canadian stop on the 1977 Ladies Professional Golf Association tour.

"I just lost my touch," said Miss Rankin Sunday after scoring a three-stroke victory over Pat Meyers and Sandra Palmer in the $80,000 event at the Lachute Golf and Country Club.

"It really made it difficult because I couldn't hold the first putts close to the hole," said Miss Rankin, whose $12,000 purse boosted her earnings for the year to $81,508 — tops on the LPGA tour.

Nevertheless, she carded a two-over-par 73 for a 212 total on the 6,300-yard layout. She had shot a sizzling 60 in the second round on Saturday.

Miss Meyers had a closinground 76 for her 215 and Miss Palmer shot 71.

Tied for fourth place were JoAnne Washam, 70-216, and Sally Little, 72-216.

Big Car Saves Cash

DETROIT (AP) — Former Detroit Tigers first baseman Norm Cash says he and his wife are alive today because of a big car.

Cash and his wife, Dorothy, were recuperating at home Monday after narrowly escaping death Friday night when the car in which they were riding collided with a pickup truck in Shiawassee County near Owosso, Mich.

Cash — who now plays slowpitch ball for the Detroit Caesars team — said he suffered "a lot of bumps and bruises." Mrs. Cash sustained a broken rib, sprained ankle and bruises, while the couple with whom they were riding also had scratches and bruises.

"The car was totaled and burned up," Cash said Monday. "If it hadn't been a Continental, I think we'd have been killed — the big car saved us."

Deputy Sgt. Michael Powers of the Shiawassee County sheriff's department said the truck, which bore Ohio plates, swerved over the center line on M-21 east of Owosso and hit the car in which the Cashes were riding.

Powers said the truck had been stolen about a week ago near Dayton. The driver, whose name was withheld, was hospitalized.

Dowagiac Captures Pair To Extend Legion Lead

Dowagiac upped its Blue-Gray American Legion League record to 8-1 over the weekend with 7-4 and 8-7 decisions over Berrien Springs in a twin bill.

Winning pitcher Kevin Vanderbush slugged a homer, double and single in the first game while Jeff Nate and Kurt Cox added two hits each. Tim Sunday swatted three hits and Mike Shembarger a triple and single for the losers.

Larry McLaughlin stretched his no-hit streak to nine frames with three innings of no-hit relief in the second game, which saw Dowagiac make up a 6-0 deficit. The winners tallied three runs in the seventh with Dan Weinman slugging a big triple and Nate getting the winning RBI single. Nate, McLaughlin and Weinman all had two hits. Dowagiac tops the Blue Division with St. Joe's second at 6-2.

Berrien Springs did beat Baroda 4-0 with Mike Shembarger tossing a one-hit gem. Niles took Three Oaks 9-2 with Kip Wilken the winning pitcher and Tracy Plummer riling two hits. Three Oaks won the non-league matchup 4-2.

Ken Cullum socked four hits with a homer in the victory while Kevin Bierhalter was 4-for-4 with a homer, two triples and four RBIs. Bierhalter and Judy Haumersen both belted two hits in the finals, but South Haven was hurt by some shaky fielding in the opening innings.

Putting your hard-earned cash to work earning interest — and keeping it safe — are ICB's prime responsibilities. But making sure all your available funds "are working" for you in this manner, is your responsibility. That's why you should consult with your action banker at ICB.

Here are some guidelines to help you plan:

- ICB's 5% Passbook Savings Account is the way to put your dollars to work taking care of unexpected bills and emergencies. Your money earns interest from day of deposit to day of withdrawal. Draw it out when you need it...put it back to work when you don't.
- ICB's 5 1/2% Golden Key 90-Day Account is the way to put your dollars to work to provide for future, anticipated needs...a new car, a boat, furniture, appliances or other durable purchases. And with a $200 balance, it entitles you to free checking privileges with your personal checking account. (Withdrawals before the end of the calendar quarter are subject to substantial interest penalty.)
- ICB's Certificates of Deposit guarantee you from 6% to 7 1/4% interest, compounded annually when left to maturity, regardless of how much interest rates may decline during the period. Maturity dates range from one year at 6% to 4 years at 7 1/4%. (Withdrawals prior to maturity are subject to a substantial interest penalty.)
- ICB's Investment Certificates, with a maturity of 6 years, earn you the highest rate of interest allowed by law...7 1/2% interest compounded annually when left to maturity. (Withdrawals prior to maturity are subject to a substantial interest penalty.)

Fairplain Still Hot

Fairplain continued to be one of the hottest teams in the Southwest Conne Mack league.

Benton Heights found that out the hard way as Fairplain dumped the Indians 9-5 Sunday at Zollar Park to up its record to 7-1 in the league.

Winning pitcher Richard Maxwell and Scott Mucia led the attack, each smacking a home run. Maxwell drove in two runs in the sixth with his and Mucia's was a solo shot in the second inning.

Powell hit a home run for Benton Heights and Mike Lomanco took the loss.

In the only other weekend game, South Haven pounded Hagar 17-1. Dodd got the win.

MUCC Backing Environmental Education Program

A statewide environmental education program financed largely by hunters and fishermen has the backing of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

The proposal calls for a 25-cent hike in the cost of hunting and fishing licenses, earmarking all of the additional revenue for environmental education efforts of the State Department of Education, Department of Natural Resources and State Environmental Education Council. The total raised would be matched by monies from the General Fund.

The proposal was embodied in one of a number of resolutions adopted by delegates to MUCC's recent 40th annual convention.

Other resolutions placed MUCC on record in opposition to Project Seafarer, storage of nuclear wastes in Michigan, winter navigation on the Great Lakes and the use of phosphates in household detergents.

coyotes, separate waterfowl seasons for the state's two peninsulas and a wide-ranging energy conservation policy.

In joining the long roster of organizations opposed to Seafarer, MUCC delegates based their objections on claims that (1) the Navy has not produced sufficient evidence that the controversial project is not detrimental to health, the environment and wildlife resources; (2) installation of the underground grid system could inflict irreparable damage on the natural beauty of the western Upper Peninsula and (3) burying of cables over a 4,000 square mile area could result in a reduction in available areas for hunting and fishing.

The resolution against the storage of nuclear waste anywhere in Michigan away from temporary sites at nuclear power plants points out that "placement of radioactive wastes in... Michigan poses the serious threat of contamination to the Great Lakes waterways and... poses a health hazard for generations."

Delegates voted to oppose winter shipping on the upper Great Lakes on the grounds that the environmental risks have not been resolved and that the danger of petroleum or other chemical spills are compounded by winter navigation. They also objected to subsidizing winter shipping operations with general tax monies for the benefit of a few large industries.

Noting that phosphorus is the primary nutrient contributing to abnormally rapid "aging" of Michigan waters, MUCC delegates voted to support the proposed ban on phosphates in household laundry detergents now before the Legislature. MUCC contends that substitutes for household laundry detergents are readily available, cost-effective, workable and practical.

The coyote, which now has a bounty on its head, would be given the status of a game animal and protected by closed seasons and bag limits if the Legislature follows the terms of another resolution adopted by MUCC.

Support for dividing Michigan into two zones for setting waterfowl seasons was contained in another resolution. This would permit an earlier opening in the Upper Peninsula than in the Lower Peninsula, something duck hunters above the Straits has long advocated.

The energy policy statement adopted by MUCC calls for legislation requiring energy conservation for non-essential uses, minimum levels of insulation in occupied buildings, energy audits in government facilities, tax incentives for vehicles exceeding minimum mileage standards and measures to encourage the development and use of renewable energy sources, such as wind and solar power.

Fishing Report

Perch, fishing on Lake Michigan off the southwestern shoreline should be generally good for the next month or two, according to the Department of Natural Resources.

The DNR says it appears that the perch have finished spawning and will be actively feeding for the next few weeks.

More coho are also showing up in the catch of Lake Michigan trawlers, especially off New Buffalo.

while trolling lures deep.

On inland waters, the DNR says the "dog days" are upon us. The best results are in the early morning and late evening hours.

Smallmouth bass success on the lower St. Joseph River has been good, though. The average size is two pounds, with a few weighing five pounds.

Catfish catches are also peaking on the lower St. Joseph and Kalamazoo Rivers. A few weigh up to 18 pounds and over, most are closer to five pounds. Cheese, crayfish and minnows are good baits.

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources is initiating a public hunting program this fall that is patterned after the public access program provided in the past by Michigan State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

And the ASCS is again assisting landowners by maintaining a supply of request forms and furnishing photocopies to identify areas open for hunting and the type of cover currently on the land. But this will be the limit of responsibility and assistance provided by ASCS.

The DNR will police the program and make annual payments, which are established in accordance with the type of cover. Rates range from 50 cents to $2.50 per acre.

The DNR project is being funded through $1 hunting stamp which southern Michigan hunters will be required to purchase this fall.

Drought reports from the Canadian prairie provinces have been cancelled by recent rains, but it appears the rains came too late for ducks.

The extremely dry conditions this spring have set the stage for a reduced breeding effort among prairie waterfowl, reports A.J. Macaulay of Ducks Unlimited.

Heavy rains in late May greatly improved the soil moisture condition and the level of permanent ponds, but by the time these rains arrived, the birds had already distributed themselves on the basis of available water, so the rains are expected to have little impact on the production effort this year.

Canada's prairie provinces are called the "duck factory" and normally produce a big share of birds for fall hunting in the United States while migrating southward.

Michigan ranks second in the nation in fishing license sales and third in hunting licenses, according to the Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service.

Michigan sold more than 1.6 million fishing licenses, tags, permits and stamps in fiscal 1976 at a cost of more than $8.6 million to fishermen. Meanwhile, hunters paid $5.8 million for 1.2 million hunting licenses.

Overall, a record 60 million Americans spent close to $318 million.

"Both figures are record highs," says Fish and Wildlife Service director Lynn A. Greenwall, "and they show that Americans continue in full hunting and fishing major pastimes."

One of every five Americans enjoys the outdoors this way. The figures represent an increase of $23 million in state sales and 500,000 in license holders over 1975. Since some states do not require licenses for ocean fishing, children under 16 or senior citizens, these figures are considered conservative estimates.

California led in fishing with sales of 5.8 million tags. Minnesota attracted the most out-of-state fishermen with 415,000 visitors (Michigan was third).

Pennsylvania led in the hunting department at 1.9 million, with New York second at 1.4 million. Montana had the distinction of leading in out-of-state sales at 127,000 (Michigan stood 17th).

Hawaii had the fewest licensed hunters and fishermen.

Free camping in Michigan's state forest campgrounds will probably come to an end in a year or two.

A bill for an annual $5 fee at 171 state forest campgrounds is reportedly dead in committee, but another bill is being prepared which would establish a nightly fee. It reportedly has widespread support.

Politicians appear to favor fee camping to reduce appropriations now coming from the general fund — $1.1 million this year — to maintain and operate the campgrounds.

The new bill will probably call for a $2 to $2.50 nightly fee.

The Department of Natural Resources now has authority from the legislature to charge $1.50 nightly at Reedsburg, Houghton Lake, Arbutus Lake and Big Bear Lake campgrounds.

Twenty five bald eagle fledglings — a record for recent years — have been found in Michigan's northern Lower Peninsula.

The 25 fledglings compares to 22 a year ago, which was also one of the best years in recent times. Reductions in DDT levels in fish, which eagles eat, and efforts to keep people out of the vicinity of nesting eagles are considered major factors in the improved nesting success of eagles.

Raspberries Ready

Wild black raspberries are ready for picking in southwestern Michigan. A generally cool

Clean water is everybody's business, the Department of Natural Resources says. But before the scientists who evaluate it came up with a Water Quality Index (WQI), they spoke a language all their own.

Today, the data which DNR scientists gather from water sampling sites are fed into a computer and processed according to a rather complex formula. The end result is a single number or "index," that is indicated on a scale of 0 to 100. The higher the WQI, the cleaner the water.

"Before we had the Water Quality Index, people would ask 'What is the water quality of a certain stream?'" says Bill McCracken, chief of the DNR's Comprehensive Studies Section.

"I'd respond the way water quality engineers had in the past, that one parameter such as dissolved oxygen was getting better but another parameter, such as phosphorus, was getting worse," he adds. "That's confusing to somebody who wants a general overview of water quality. I feel we owe it to the people of the state to communicate in terms they can understand."

The Water Quality Index was developed by the National Sanitation Foundation, in Ann Arbor after scientists and water quality experts throughout the country were polled about what constitutes good or bad water quality.

The WQI looks at nine parameters or factors that determine the quality of water in a given stream. Some of these parameters are given more weight than others and consist of dissolved oxygen, fecal coliform, pH, biochemical oxygen demand (BOD), nitrates, phosphates, temperature, turbidity and total solids.

Dissolved oxygen and fecal coliform density are weighted the heaviest. Oxygen in the water is essential to fish and other aquatic life, while fecal coliform — bacteria from the intestines — indicate raw sewage that could contain disease-causing organisms.

Phosphates and nitrates are nutrients that can cause growth of algae or aquatic weeds and turbidity is a measure of how clear the water is.

Once all these components are analyzed, the computer calculates the index of from 0 to 100. Water scoring 50 or less is considered 'poor', 51 to 70 is medium, and 71 to 100 is considered good. For example, a good trout stream, such as the Au Sable, may have an average WQI of 80, while the Rouge River might average around 50.

"The Water Quality Index is not a water pollution index," McCracken says, noting that factors other than pollution, such as weather, geology and geography cause natural variations in water quality.

For example, in northern Michigan where streams such as the Au Sable are fed by groundwater from sandy soil, the WQI changes very little after a rainfall. In parts of the southern Lower Peninsula, however, clay soils mean sediment will wash into streams, lowering the WQI. However, WQIs which average in the "medium" to "poor" range are almost always caused by pollution problems, McCracken says.

While the WQI is good for communicating the general, overall quality of a stream's water to the public in terms they can understand, it does not take into account toxic materials such as DDT, PCB, or mercury. To the scientist, it has little value because it cannot address particular technical problems. In addition, it is not useful for enforcement action.

Still, the Water Quality Index brings to the public the work of water quality experts and tells us how good or how bad the water really is.

Special Horicon Hunt Cancelled

Low water conditions at Horicon National Wildlife Refuge has prompted the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to cancel a special waterfowl hunt planned for the Wisconsin refuge this fall.

"We anticipate mud flat conditions, over most of the refuge by Oct. 1," said FWS regional director Jack Hemphill. "At best, the deepest water areas will probably be down to about one foot of water. Boat access to hunting sites would be near impossible. It is unrealistic to consider the hunt plan this year."

Around 150 permits would have been authorized daily for the special hunt, Hemphill said, as part of a five-year management plan to discourage a build up of overly large concentrations of Canada

The heat pump. An energy-saving idea a lot of people are comfortable with. Even Uncle Sam.

The heat pump is a device that heats and cools your home. When it cools, it works like any air conditioner. But when it heats, it works more efficiently than any other electric heating system around. It captures the heat that exists in outside air, even on cold days. As a result, you can heat your home using up to one-third less electricity than other electric heating systems.

This more-for-your-money, energy-saving feature has made the heat pump very popular with a lot of people. Including the federal government, whose energy agencies recommend it over other types of electric heat.

Actually, we don't sell heat pumps. But, the way we figure it, every bit of electric energy that can be saved these days helps all of us.

Changes Hands, Not Location

Bank Invests In Neighborhood

By DAVID TREADWELL
AP Urban Affairs Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The South Shore Bank has helped to keep its neighborhood together by investing in it.

Four years ago the bank changed hands, but the predominantly black community was skeptical when told the new owners wanted to do things differently.

"I remember saying to one man, 'Hello, I'm Milton Davis, the new bank president,'" said the black banker. "He looked at me and said, 'Yeh, and I'm Joe Lewis,' and walked away."

"How many times have blacks been promised streets lined with gold," Davis says. "No one believed us when we said this is a new day. They were looking for the hustle."

But the hustle never came, and modest success has been achieved.

The new bank owners put mortgage money back into the community, beefed up services, lengthened banking hours, and raised interest rates on savings accounts.

A 19-member resident advisory board, nominated by South Shore community organizations, was created to communicate with the bank on neighborhood problems. A series of consumer education workshops was launched.

Between 1960 and 1970, the lakefront community of South Shore went from 96 per cent white to 69 per cent black. By 1973, when the new bank owners took over, blacks made up about 80 per cent of the total 89,000 population.

Businesses abandoned the commercial strip on 71st Street, Parkside, the South Shore area into which blacks first moved, became a housing cancer that threatened to spread as white landlords milked the buildings for quick profits.

The former owners of the South Shore Bank no longer wanted to invest in a neighborhood that was obviously on the way down.

Illinois does not permit branch banking and in 1972 the owners asked the Comptroller of Currency for permission to move their office 10 miles north to the downtown Loop. They cited among other reasons a nearly 25 per cent decline in total assets from the $78 million in 1967.

In a rare move, the request was denied following persuasive testimony by the South Shore Commission, a bi-racial community organization, that the move would result in irreversible decline.

So the South Shore Bank changed hands instead of changing locations. The main goal of the new owners was to halt the redlining of the neighborhood and to resume making mortgage loans in it. They also felt that "greenlining" could be profitable.

Since 1973, the bank's total assets have climbed to $84.5 million from $44.2 million while its total deposits have gone to $48.1 million from $40.6 million.

But perhaps most important to South Shore residents, the bank has lived up to its promise to invest in the community, where the housing stock ranges from elegant lakeside mansions to sturdy single-family bungalows to multi-story apartment buildings.

Shirley Mann, a researcher for the Illinois state public aid department, moved to the South Shore in 1965, but was ready to pull out before the bank changed hands — and policies.

"It was really very frightening. The shops deteriorated, neighborhoods started going down. And the police didn't seem to be able to tell the thugs from the upstanding black residents."

But she says the bank sparked something in the neighborhood. "There was a definite and very noticeable turnaround. It renewed people's confidence in the community. Prior to the changeover, the bank acted like it wasn't the least bit interested in what was going on."

Ronald Grzywinski, bank board chairman, developed the model upon which South Shore bank is based out of talks he, Davis and Mary Houghton, bank vice president, had when they were officers at Chicago's Hyde Park National Bank.

"It seemed to us that what was needed was a highly capitalized business corporation that would operate for profit and whose business would be neighborhood rebuilding," Grzywinski said.

With the help of a group of socially-minded investors, Grzywinski was able to purchase the South Shore Bank for $3.1 million.

"We're what bankers really ought to be and in some small towns probably still are," Grzywinski said. "I don't think we're radical. We're just taking banking back to the community, where it belongs."

Few deny that major problems still exist such as the poverty-riddled apartment buildings, overcrowded schools, the lawdry commercial strip and the crime.

"We hope we can get at all these some day," says Grzywinski. "Development is really one very long series of piece-by-piece actions. There's no grand scheme, no grand plan. It's like putting a puzzle together, very slowly, piece by piece."

Q: What's this about Ryan O'Neil's mother? — T. P., Manhattan.

A: Seems extremely unlikely. Joanna may have been a model for Ryan as an actor, but as a husband, no. Friends have said that Ryan never understood the obligations of a husband and his success only made the situation worse. And they add that women were always attracted to him even though he must not have been attracted to them.

literator in Great Britain and magazine mogul John Edwards, 70, died last week of a heart attack. He had been considered a great idea for a new monthly magazine: a publication of obliterations of every famous person who had died the previous month. The magazine was to be called "Platypus" but nobody in the Ambassadors organization, which owns TV Guide and Seventeen, wanted to work on it. You might say the publication died a quiet death.

Q: All those charity activities of Liz Taylor — isn't it all part of a star's publicity machine? — R. H., Tenafly, N.J.

A: It's true that Liz and many other stars do benefit in terms of public goodwill and tax write-offs. However, Liz is one of the most generous of public figures and once interested homesites totally dedicated to a cause. She does much of her work through the Red Cross and other public charities. For her secretarial work done for the Carter kids and relatives? — R. R., Howard Beach, N.Y.

WOODY: The snake fell off

Some months ago I discussed the bizarre constitutional dimensions of a proposed treaty with Mexico. In effect, under the agreement was that Americans held in Mexico's prisons, largely on drug-connected charges, would be turned over to the U.S. to complete their terms in federal slammer. In legal terms this amounts to the employment of the treaty power to overrule the Bill of Rights.

Apparently my initial grenade when the treaty was announced last November set State Department lawyers scrambling. In order to get around the larger script of the Bill of Rights and duck the treaty-power question, survivors have been busy concocting fantasies. Now the treaty draft contains a provision prohibiting any American court from testing habeas corpus in a returned prisoner, a prohibition based on a waiver of his rights by the individual concerned. In other words, a prisoner gives his "express consent, voluntarily with full knowledge of the consequences thereof" to his deprivation of Constitutional rights. If he refuses, he risks in Mexico.

Without getting into the legal definition of "duress," there are several things wrong with this habeas corpus scheme. First, it assumes that an individual can waive the right of habeas corpus, one of the key instruments in the implementation of the process of law. Second, it assumes the treaty power can be used to authorize an individual to barter away constitutional rights. According to the Constitution, "The privileges of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in cases of rebellion or invasion the public safety may require it." Symptomatic for the plight of prisoners, the understanding, but does not directly challenge federal affairs was unimpaired by the Constitution. This was nonsense then, it is nonsense now, and would doubtless be given decent burial by the Supreme Court if the opportunity arose.

Well, the case of the Mexican prisoners might well provide the opportunity. If any one of them is in the United States 24 hours without getting a writ of habeas corpus, he should be transferred to a mental institution. Whether the individuals concerned are candidates for sainthood or Joyce Kilmer, the "Man of the Year" award is totally irrelevant; constitutional rights are not reserved for choir boys or others pure in heart. To put it another way, American jails are reserved for those who have received American justice.

As in similar systems (France's, for example), the basic function of the judges is to inquire, "if you're not guilty, why are they saying such things about you?" And prison conditions are such as possibly to persuade Tom Sawyer that Alcatraz is a resort hotel.

What the treaty — with the best of intentions — was designed to do was return Americans to "civilized" jails. But there is a constitutional hurdle. No person can be incarcerated in a federal prison (or a state one for that matter) unless he or she has been provided with basic criminal rights: indictment by prescribed techniques (with the grand jury mandatory in the federal arena), adequate defense counsel, trial by jury, the right to refuse to incriminate oneself and so on.

The net result is that the estimated 600 young Americans in Mexican custody (and the treaty is devised for use elsewhere if the Mexican experiment works) could be traded to the U.S., but certainly not held in prison here. True, there is a crazy Supreme Court decision, United States v. Curtiss-Wright Export Co. (1936) in which Justice Sutherland by totally unsound reasoning held the Federal government's power over foreign affairs was unlimited by the Constitution. This was nonsense then, it is nonsense now, and would doubtless be given decent burial by the Supreme Court if the opportunity arose.

Well, the case of the Mexican prisoners might well provide the opportunity. If any one of them is in the United States 24 hours without getting a writ of habeas corpus, he should be transferred to a mental institution. Whether the individuals concerned are candidates for sainthood or Joyce Kilmer, the "Man of the Year" award is totally irrelevant; constitutional rights are not reserved for choir boys or others pure in heart. To put it another way, American jails are reserved for those who have received American justice.

Washington Misread B1 Decision Signs

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — This time, it seemed, President Carter was doing business Washington's way.

To the capital, the signs were familiar. By stages, as gracefully as possible, Carter backed away from his opposition to the B1 bomber.

The conclusion was obvious — and wrong.

For Carter had not changed his mind about the B1. He doesn't think it worth the money — up to $12 million for each airplane. He doesn't think it is needed, and he doesn't want it built.

He will almost certainly get his way. The White House is convinced that Congress will follow his guidance.

Democratic congressional leaders are with him, even though the House already voted to go ahead with production of the B1. The likely script now: a Senate vote to reverse that, with the House then agreeing.

For days, there had been hints and omens that Carter would swallow his past opposition and agree to at least limited production of the most expensive warplane ever built. All speculation, in Congress and around the city, was that Carter would approve some sort of compromise.

He didn't disclose his judgment to anyone but a select handful of associates. The speculation became a matter of concern at the White House, and Press Secretary Jody Powell tried, with Carter's concurrence, to dampen it.

But there were too many of the standard indicators that the Washington establishment has learned to read. A senator emerged from the White House to say he expected a partial go-ahead for the B1. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said he favored production of the warplane, to strengthen the U.S. hand in arms negotiations.

Wrong again. Carter and O'Neill didn't discount the matter in advance of the House vote and, even when he endorsed the B1, O'Neill said he would go along with the President's later decision, whatever it was.

The President apparently has raised questions that can't be answered immediately.

The administration has yet to come up with its specific recommendations on B1 research spending and on funds to pay for Carter's alternatives, including modernization of F-15s and work on the cruise missile. Those specifics are being worked out during the current congressional recess.

One official said the administration is better off with the B1 money in the appropriations bill than the President's plan involves use of a portion of those funds to pay for other strategic weapons now that the bomber is to be dropped. Had the House voted to scrap B1 production, $1.5 billion would have been cut from the bill and the administration would have had to get some of it restored.

Still, as Carter acknowledged, some congressional members voted for the bomber, thinking that was the administration's position. Those votes may be more difficult to undo the next time the administration needs support.

This time, both supporters and opponents of the B1 were surprised by Carter's rejection of the project, even though he had said he would not let the campaign statement be a factor in his decision.

That statement dates from June 16, 1976. In the intervening year, Carter had seemed to back off from his opposition to the B1, and he said on Thursday that he might want to let the campaign statement be a factor in his decision.

"I have made it, I think, with a completely open mind," he said.

And he handled it his own way, which may be the real lesson for Carter-watchers, in Congress and out. Judging the new Washington establishment by the ground rules of the old ones is a high risk business.

By TOM RENNER
South Haven Correspondent

SOUTH HAVEN — The 14th annual National Blueberry Festival attracted record crowds as it wound up its 1977 schedule over the weekend, according to A. W. Roberts, executive director of the South Haven Chamber of Commerce. Ideal weather Monday brought out an estimated 20,000 people to view the 180-unit Independence Day parade through the central business district.

Large crowds were reported at all other festival events and the only damper came Sunday when a rainstorm abbreviated the annual clothesline art show in Johnston park. Many of the art exhibitors stayed on Monday to display their wares.

Winners in Monday's parade, which was sponsored by the

Coloma Woman, 87, Dies After Walking Into Car

COLOMA — The death Saturday night of Mrs. Dottie Fern King, 87, of Coloma, was due to injuries suffered earlier in the day when she walked into the side of a car being driven by the son of a police officer, according to Coloma police.

Mrs. King, 131 Paw Paw street, was injured about 8:50 a.m. Saturday when she walked into the side of a car driven by David Allen Drach, 20, of 2603 Buyer road, Coloma. She died at 10:51 p.m. at Memorial hospital in St. Joseph, police said.

Drach, who was not ticketed or charged, is the son of Lt. Jack Drach, commander of the Berrien county Metro Narcotics unit. Lt. Drach is a Benton township officer on assignment to the narcotics unit.

Coloma Police Chief Kenneth Unruh said the accident remains under investigation pending a review by the Berrien county prosecutor's office.

Her death was the 15th traffic fatality on Berrien county roads this year, but the only traffic death in southwestern Michigan over the long July 4 holiday weekend.

Police said Drach told them that he was traveling east on Center street at about 20 miles per hour when the woman walked into the side of his auto near the south Paw Paw street intersection.

Police said that Mrs. King told officers at the accident scene that she was trying to cross the street and did not see the oncoming auto. Mrs. King was walking on the sidewalk north on Paw Paw street and started across Center street from the southwest corner of the intersection.

Two witnesses to the accident told police Mrs. King had walked into the auto police said. Sgt. Jerry Crockett, investigating officer, said it was his opinion that the driver did not violate any criminal traffic codes and was unable to avoid the accident.

Police said that Dr. Charles Bounstra, Berrien county's chief medical examiner, told them that Mrs. King died as a result of injuries suffered in the accident.

She was born March 27, 1890, in Antrim County, Mich. Her husband, Herman, preceded her in death. She is survived by several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be Thursday at 2 p.m. at Coloma United Methodist church of which she was a member. Burial will be in Coloma cemetery. Friends may call at Davidson chapel of Florin funeral service beginning at 7 this evening.

Memorials may be made to Coloma Emergency Ambulance service.

Death Of Son Doesn't End Mother's Torment

By DAVID WHITING
YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — Every weekday this spring, Kathy Wirts got up, sent her 8-year-old daughter, Kathleen, off to school and remembered. Her eyes often filled with tears, and she went back to sleep to forget.

But even her sleep was wracked with the painful memory of her only son, 11-year-old Mike, slowly dying from cancer.

Mike's grim ordeal of growing weaker for months with the life-robbing disease ended last February. But her boy's death did not end the torment for Mrs. Wirts.

She finds herself suddenly crying in the middle of the day. The hours spent driving to hospitals, waiting for doctors and trying to make Mike's life happier are gone now, and Mrs. Wirts is left lonely and trying to understand why the child she bore had to die.

Every Friday, and probably every Friday for weeks to come, 6-year-old Michael Normand of Ypsilanti, climbs in the car next to his mom and heads for the University of Michigan Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Like his older namesake, Michael hates the treatments he travels 10 miles for. And like Mike Wirts, young Normand does exactly what his doctors ask because he knows he has cancer and understands — as much as a lad his age can — the gravity of the situation.

Mrs. Normand learned last September her only boy had a bone-debilitating cancer called neuroblastoma. Doctors told her Michael probably had less than two years to live.

She accepted the somber news and began to bring Michael in for chemotherapy treatments.

An especially powerful drug used in chemotherapy recently made the boy's hair fall out, but at least a momentary victory seemed realized. No new tumors were being discovered.

Then Michael's urine began to turn red with blood. Doctors found the chemotherapy was destroying Michael's bladder along with the cancer which enveloped it. The drug treatment was stopped immediately, and several weeks later two new tumors were found.

Michael Normand seems to be fighting a losing battle with the cancer that grips his body. While not all cancer victims succumb to the disease, living with cancer is painful for all involved.

Nearly 25 per cent of Americans will have some form of cancer in their lifetime, but few actually die from the cell-corroding tumor.

Experts do not really undersland what causes many cancers. So when it strikes, people usually are caught off guard. But they learn quickly.

Mike Wirts' cancer forced him to drop out of his third grade class shortly before his 10th birthday. His condition and death left scars on his playmates.

Sleepwalking, stomach aches, headaches, sudden outbursts of contagious crying and general depression were common problems among Mike's classmates for days after they learned of his death, according to their teacher, Maureen Maniaci.

Fear and insecurity caused by losing something, especially a friend, sometimes make a child start crying for no apparent reason, Mrs. Maniaci said.

"A lot was a fear of death," she explained. "They were afraid it might happen to them. The children were all very aware of his illness, particularly after Mike's hair fell out."

Several parents did not want

Mike Wirts' death discussed with their children "because they didn't want their kids upset," notes Mrs. Maniaci. "But it just couldn't be ignored."

After discussing the issue, school officials decided to deal with the death as openly as possible and answer the students' questions.

"You just can't hide something very real," said Mrs. Maniaci.

Some questions were dealt with on a group basis, while others required individual attention, recalled the teacher. A few children had to be sent home because their depression was bringing the others down.

Experts agree with Mrs. Maniaci's methods of telling it like it is.

There are limits to a child's ability to understand death and the long-term future, but letting them ask questions and giving answers is important," says Asst. Prof. Steven Vincent of Eastern Michigan University's clinical psychology department.

Not only is it important to the cancer patient's classmates to understand what is going on, it is necessary for the victim's welfare.

Giving the child a sense of security probably is one of the most important concepts in helping a young patient cope with cancer, experts agree.

"You tell the child, 'I'll be with you, no matter what,'" said Dr. David Tilford, Mike Normand's physician at the hospital.

CANCER PAINFUL FOR ALL: Michael Wirts, of Van Buren township near Ypsilanti, died Feb. 15, just weeks after his 10th birthday. Terminal cancer took its toll on his once healthy body in less than year. He had bone-debilitating cancer called neuroblastoma. (AP Wirephoto)

Honesty does not always work. Misplaced guilt can cause problems. Parents of cancer victims blame doctors, the ecology and even their ancestral genes for tumors.

One family in Ypsilanti blames the auto factories for polluting their child's body. One youngster who lost a brother from cancer said, "We don't talk about him any more."

Meanwhile, every Sunday, Mrs. Wirts visits her son's grave, usually bringing flowers because "Mike liked them."

And Mrs. Normand waits. She waits to find out when, and if, she will have to start buying flowers.

How Hard We Work Is Topic On TV Tonight

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andrew Rooney, whose film essays on Washington bureaucracy and dining out have added a nice light touch to CBS News' sharp, often funny, earlier dissections of bureaucracy.

Early on, Rooney's touch for good-humored irony shows up when he recalls that a board chairman, Stanford Noll, had "said that the trouble with the American worker is that he's making so much money, he takes off on vacation whenever he feels like it."

"Well, that was sort of a catchy remark, so we called Stanford Noll's office in Cleveland to see if we could come there and talk to him," Rooney adds.

"His secretary told us he'd taken off for Fort Lauderdale and wouldn't be back for six weeks."

So Rooney & Co. decamped to Fort Lauderdale, and a pretty interesting interview with Mr. Noll ensued.

Woe, sag sets in with repetitive claims from various workers, a stray street-painter, even a man who's put shoes together for 42 years, that they all like their jobs and like to work.

It adds Rooney's conclusion that Americans do work hard, do enjoy their labors, but there's gotta be another way.

Watervliet To Test Sewers For Leaks

WATERVLIET — Sanitary sewers will be tested with smoke July 6 to 13 here, according to the engineering firm of Wightman and Associates, Inc. Smoke will be induced into the system to check for any leaks. According to the engineers, residents will be notified a day before testing is scheduled in their block.

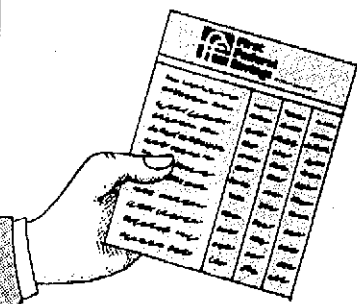

The firm said residents should not be alarmed should smoke enter homes. It is non-toxic and will not produce dirt or residue, the firm stated. The engineers asked that should smoke enter a home, residents should open doors and windows to speed dissipation and leave the home until it clears. Workers will be the area of the testing and residents with questions or problems should contact workers, the engineers said.

N.Y. Bus Hijacking Leaves Two Dead

By MARC ROSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — An embittered 26-year-old seaman charged with initiating a siege of terror that left two dead aboard a hijacked bus and nearly paralyzed a giant airport told police today he took over the bus because he was broke.

LUCKY MAN: John McGavern, 50, a librarian at University of Hartford, tells newsmen how gunman jumped aboard a bus en route to Hartford, Conn. Monday, and shot him. "I think he was aiming for my face. I was looking right down the barrel," said McGavern, whose neck shows bullet entrance and exit wound. (AP Wirephoto).

Niles Area Break-Ins Reported

NILES — State police here investigated two separate break-ins in the Niles area over the weekend in which an estimated $4,000 in cash and merchandise were reported taken.

In both cases, police said the homeowners returned from holiday trips to discover the break-ins.

Robert Quick, 2120 South 13th street, Niles, told police that $173 in cash and items valued at nearly $2,000 were taken from his home. The items included, radios, tools, and a portable television set. Quick told police he discovered the break-in Sunday night.

Norman Williams, 1012 Bailey road, Niles, told police he discovered $2,200 worth of stereo equipment, including tape recorders and speakers, were taken from his residence. He discovered the break-in Sunday afternoon, police said.

Crash Puts Two Men In Hospital

FENNVILLE — Two men remain hospitalized today after their van left I-196 south of here last night and rolled over.

Frank Kavanaugh, 27, of Garden City, and David Masters, 26, of Westland, were listed in satisfactory condition at Holland hospital this morning.

State police from the South Haven post said the men were passengers in a van driven by James Thomas, 30, of Inkster. The van went off the southbound lane of I-196 near 118th avenue, Ganges township at 8:50 p.m., police said.

The driver, who was released after treatment at Holland hospital, told police he lost control after being cut off by another vehicle. Police said the accident remains under investigation.

Van Theft Reported

COLOMA — Michael Quirke of Chicago Heights, Ill., told Coloma township police his 1975 blue Dodge van was taken from the parking lot of the Tryst tavern in Coloma township late Sunday night or early yesterday morning.

Police said Quirke estimated the value of the van at $6,000, and the camping gear, outboard motor and golf clubs in the van at another $1,500.

The theft was reported at 2:15 a.m., yesterday, police said.

MOST SOLEMN
VATICAN CITY (AP) — A Papal Bull is the most solemn form of papal document. Its name derives from the leaden seal used on the document.

Sources close to the investigation told The Associated Press that Luis Robinson told them he was headed back to his ship, the USS Detroit, based in Bath, Maine, but only had enough money for bus fare to Hartford, Conn.

Robinson was booked today on charges that he hijacked the bus, shot two people to death, injured three others, then held authorities at bay during the siege for about nine hours at holiday-crowded John F. Kennedy International Airport.

He surrendered shortly before midnight after unsuccessfully demanding $8 million and a plane to fly him to Cuba.

Robinson was to be arraigned on the charges later today.

The sources quoted Robinson, born in Panama and living in Somerset, N.J., as saying he boarded the Vermont-bound bus, undecided whether to commandeer it or get off in Hartford and hitchhike to Maine.

Meanwhile, the New York Post quoted a source today as saying Robinson told police he had been inspired by a dream. "He said it came to him in a dream, he had to do this," the source said. "He said the country was going into chaos and somebody had to do something to stop it."

Police also said Robinson told investigators that he had experienced problems with "people who picked on him" aboard his ship.

In New Jersey, Robinson's mother, Doris, today expressed grief for her son's alleged actions. "How could you be killing people? I don't understand. I don't understand," she said.

Robinson's father, Ernesto, said he last saw his son two or three months ago. "I don't know what led to this," he said, his voice shaking.

For most of the 25 passengers aboard the bus, the first sign of trouble came after the bus left the Port Authority terminal in midtown Manhattan. The gunman fired a .45-caliber pistol at a college librarian, then forced him to move to the front of the bus, bleeding from the neck.

"This is what's going to happen to you if you don't do what I say," the gunman told the passengers as he ordered the driver to turn toward Kennedy Airport.

Later, after the bus had crashed through an airport fence and the hijacker had killed a woman passenger and the driver and dumped them onto a runway, passenger Bruce Deboer, 17, of East Hartford, Conn., was ordered to drive the bus.

"I decided, as did the other passengers, that it wouldn't pay off to try and rush him," said Deboer of the long ordeal.

Deboer was ordered to drive after Norman Bozick, the 41-year-old driver of the Vermont Transit Co. bus, was fatally wounded. Bozick died later at a hospital.

Before that, Nettie Blassberg, 57, of Greenfield, Mass., had been shot and killed when she tried to overpower her captor. "She reached up behind him and grabbed him around the throat and tried to do karate on him so that he would drop the gun," said 11-year-old Sunjoy Totenu.

"He said 'Don't ever ever try that' and he shot her," the young passenger said.

Deboer said Bozick was shot when he reacted to the woman's death and "made a lunge for the man and tried to push him out of the bus."

A Hong Kong businessman aboard the bus, Jimmy Lo, was seriously wounded several hours later when he tried to escape during negotiations with Robinson.

And an 8-year-old boy suffered cuts and bruises when he was hurled from the moving bus about half an hour before Robinson surrendered.

The 47-foot bus was the largest thing Deboer ever had driven. It showed, twice, Deboer drove the bus across the airport. Both times, the airport was closed, forcing all flights to be delayed or diverted.

The second time, Deboer said he had only been ordered to back it up but he didn't know how. The result was another trip across the airport, where a police vehicle rammed the bus shortly before the siege ended.

"I'm happy to be alive. We're all happy to be alive because it was tough and go and none of us knew if we'd ever get off the bus," said Deboer.

"We were ... in the Bronx when I heard a gunshot and this man walked forward with another man pointing a gun at him," Deboer said. The wounded man was John McGavern of Hartford, Conn., a librarian at the University of Hartford. He was shot in the neck.

McGavern was shoved off the bus at the airport. Interviewed later from a hospital stretcher, McGavern described Robinson as "racially upset."

He said Robinson "was very upset about the racial situation in the United States. He talked about how badly he had been treated in the United States and wanted to leave."

Niles Twp. Firemen Are Hurt

NILES — Two Niles township firemen suffered minor injuries while battling a house fire south of here here about 8 Sunday morning.

Treated and released from Pawling hospital, Niles, were Gene Baker, 41, and Kenneth Davis, 27, both of Niles. Firemen said Baker, a full-time fireman, suffered smoke inhalation, while Davis, a volunteer, suffered a cut on his hand.

Firemen said a faulty electrical cord on a lamp was the suspected cause of the fire at the David Bell residence, 227 Brooks street. Members of the Bell family escaped injury, firemen said.

Dempsey Blasts Carter Proposal

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — President Carter's plan for welfare reform could end up costing Michigan more than it now pays for welfare, says state Social Services Director John T. Dempsey.

Under the plan, the federal government would raise assistance levels, but would not increase the size of its overall welfare budget, Dempsey said.

"They are saying that they won't pay a penny more, for welfare after reform than they did before reform," he said.

To stay within the budget, new federal rules may make many marginally poor recipients ineligible for federal cash assistance, Dempsey said.

The President's plan could wind up pushing some recipients off the federal rolls, leaving the state to pick up the tab for them, said Dempsey.

"Both morally and politically we could not cut the benefit level or drop people from the rolls who need help," Dempsey said. "Our guess is that we're going to have to spend substantially more under the new welfare plan."

Carter's plan would abolish several existing welfare programs and replace them with a single system.

Consolidated would be Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Supplemental Security Income, food stamps, the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) and the public service jobs program.

The federal government would give each welfare family of four a minimum payment of $4,200 a year, or $1,100 for single adults, which the states could supplement if they wished.

The minimum annual Michigan payment to a family of four, including food stamps, currently is $6,000, Dempsey said. The federal share is $3,000

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Stalled by bitter floor fights last week on major bills, lawmakers are expected to race pell-mell this week through more than $3 billion in budget bills, among other touchy measures.

And, not surprisingly, there may be some fireworks as they rush to pass a backlog of bills before leaving for summer vacation.

They'll likely wrestle with bills to reduce PBB in Michigan food and to allow the teaching of birth control in public schools. But most of the action will be in small conference committees, where House and Senate members will try to reach compromises on budget bills often many millions of dollars apart.

The goal will be to agree on budget figures that both chambers — and Gov. William Milliken — can accept.

An issue facing one committee will be how much money to give the state police and how much — if any — to give county sheriff departments.

A Senate budget bill would keep state police patrols on Detroit freeways but would not expand the patrols in Detroit or extend them to other cities as Milliken has asked. Instead, the Senate would give $4.5 million to nine county sheriff departments, a move Milliken and other opponents call pork-barraling.

He's threatened to veto such a bill, but the conference committee does not appear to be worried about that. Instead, committee aides are trying to write the bill so Milliken would have to veto the entire state police budget if he wanted to get rid of the $4.5 million.

On a separate financial front, state Sen. Thomas Guastello could run into a brick wall next week on his move to end city income taxes for persons who work but do not live in 10

Michigan cities. The plan, adopted by the Senate in one of its budget bills, would have the state reimburse the cities for the nearly $28 million a year they would lose.

Guastello will try to convince a conference committee's House members to recommend his scheme to the full House. Without its support, the plan will be dead. Milliken has said he opposes Guastello's idea, too.

After a highly emotional debate last week on a bill to soften marijuana penalties, the House this week is expected to plunge into another tough question — whether or not to allow the teaching of birth control in public schools.

On the other side of the Capitol, the Senate is expected to make more changes in a bill to drastically reduce PBB in Michigan food before approving it. The Senate already has weakened the bill by allowing more PBB in food than would the House version.

Estimated to cost between $17 million and $45 million over five years, the measure also would reimburse farmers for their losses due to stricter PBB guidelines.

Health News... "Idea Explosion" Aimed At Workers' Injuries

A frequent participant in seminars, we asked Dr. Vince Ackerman of the Ackerman Chiropractic Center what he thought to be the important benefits that could be derived from the type of research seminars he attends.

"There would be absolutely no purpose in attending a convention or seminar if my patients were not to be the ultimate beneficiaries," said Dr. Ackerman.

"The leaders of our profession are currently involved in virtual 'idea explosion' concerning effective treatment of on-the-job injuries."

"Let's face it," said Dr. Ackerman, "we've got to get the fellow that works on a day-to-day basis back on the job as quickly as possible if he is injured and therefore temporarily removed from that job."

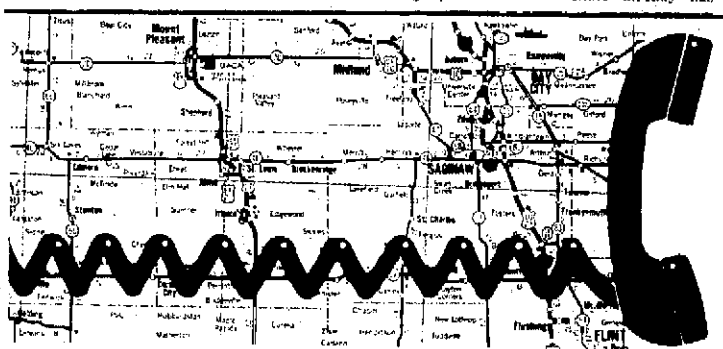

Injured workman is too quickly forgotten if we can't get him back on his job and at peak efficiency. I've heard of too many fellows who lost their job because they had been laid up by a job-connected injury."

Many have voiced the opinion that Dr. Ackerman's "truck record" in caring for on-the-job injuries is one to be admired.

The workman needs the best...deserves the best...if he is hurt on the job and therefore I will go anywhere in this country to exchange ideas with others; to share and learn so that I can know the most advanced methods and science our profession has to offer.

"When a fellow comes to me from an on-the-job injury he expects me to give him the best possible care so that guided by the most advanced knowledge I can get him back on the job quickly," continued Dr. Ackerman. "I'm not about to betray that confidence."

Dr. Ackerman maintains Chiropractic offices at 3818 Red Arrow Highway, St. Joseph. (Telephone 428-1700) (c) ARS 1977 ADV.

State Road Crashes Claim Coloman, Singer's Wife

From ASSOCIATED PRESS

An 87-year-old Coloma woman and the wife of a member of the Four Lads singing group were among 23 people killed in accidents on Michigan highways over the long holiday weekend, according to state police.

The 23 deaths — four more than for the same holiday period last year — helped push the nation's traffic toll to 531 for the period between 5 p.m. Friday and midnight Monday.

There were 497 deaths on U.S. highways last year during the Bicentennial Fourth of July, also a three-day weekend. The highest death tally recorded over a Fourth of July weekend was 756 in 1972, a four-day weekend.

Included in Michigan's list of fatalities was Dottie Fern King, 87, of Coloma, a pedestrian who died late Saturday after being struck by a car in Coloma.

Sharon Busci, 38, of Las Vegas, Nev., was killed Monday when her car rolled over in the median on U.S. 131 near Portage in Kalamazoo county. She apparently was distracted by the family cat, state troopers said.

Her husband, Frank — a member of the Four Lads — and a son and daughter also were in the car but sustained only minor injuries.

In another single-car rollover accident, Larry Eugene Hilliker, 33, Cedar Springs, died on a rural Ionia County road early Monday.

State police said more than half of Michigan's fatal accidents involved motorcycles.

One motorcycleist, James P. Quern, Jr., of Nashville, died Monday when his cycle struck a truck on M-37 in Barry County.

Larry Wotard, 27, of Detroit, was killed Monday when his motorcycle collided head-on with a car in Westland.

Robert Morrison, 26, of Woodland Beach, died Monday when his motorcycle hit a parked car in Monroe County.

Roger Benoit, 14, of Paris in Mecosta County, was killed at 10 p.m. Sunday in adjacent Newaygo County.

Authorities said the youngster's motorcycle, without lights, collided head-on with a car that had pulled out of a line of oncoming traffic to pass.

In a non-motorcycle accident, Daniel Langell, 13, of East Detroit, was killed Sunday when the car in which he was riding collided broadside with another.

Two motorcycleists died in an accident Saturday near Marquette. Police said Richard Maul, 23, of Grand Blanc, and Robert Stonhouse, 24, of Marquette, were riding on a cycle that crossed the center line and struck a car.

Two car drivers died in a head-on accident Friday night. Larry Gene Moore, 32, of Pontiac, and Ronald Joseph Sobies, 23, of Pontiac, were killed when their cars collided on an Oakland County road.

Other victims:

—Agnes Gaw, 71, of LaPorte, Ind., who died Saturday in a two-car broadside collision at an intersection in Newaygo County's Dayton Township. She was a passenger in one of the cars.

—Larry Shepler, 40, of Harbor Springs, a motorcycleist who died Saturday when he was struck broadside by a car in Emmet County.

—Renigh Speight, 9, of Inkster, who was killed Saturday in a head-on accident in Inkster. He was a passenger in one of the cars.

—Wayne Juusola, 30, of Muskegon, who died Saturday night in Lilley Township of Newaygo County when his motorcycle ran off the road, hit a parked cycle and a tree.

—Lee Miller, 19, of Burton, who was killed Saturday when a car turned in front of his motorcycle near Burton in Genesee County.

—Henry Arndt, 53, of Bay City, who died Sunday when his car ran off the road to avoid a collision and hit a utility pole in Monitor Township of Bay County.

—Richard Willacker, 46, of Grandville, who died Saturday when his vehicle hit a tree in Grandville of Kent County.

—Laverne Perry, 42, of Grayling, who was killed Sunday in a two-car broadside collision at Michigan 78 and Michigan 72, near South Branch Township, Crawford County.

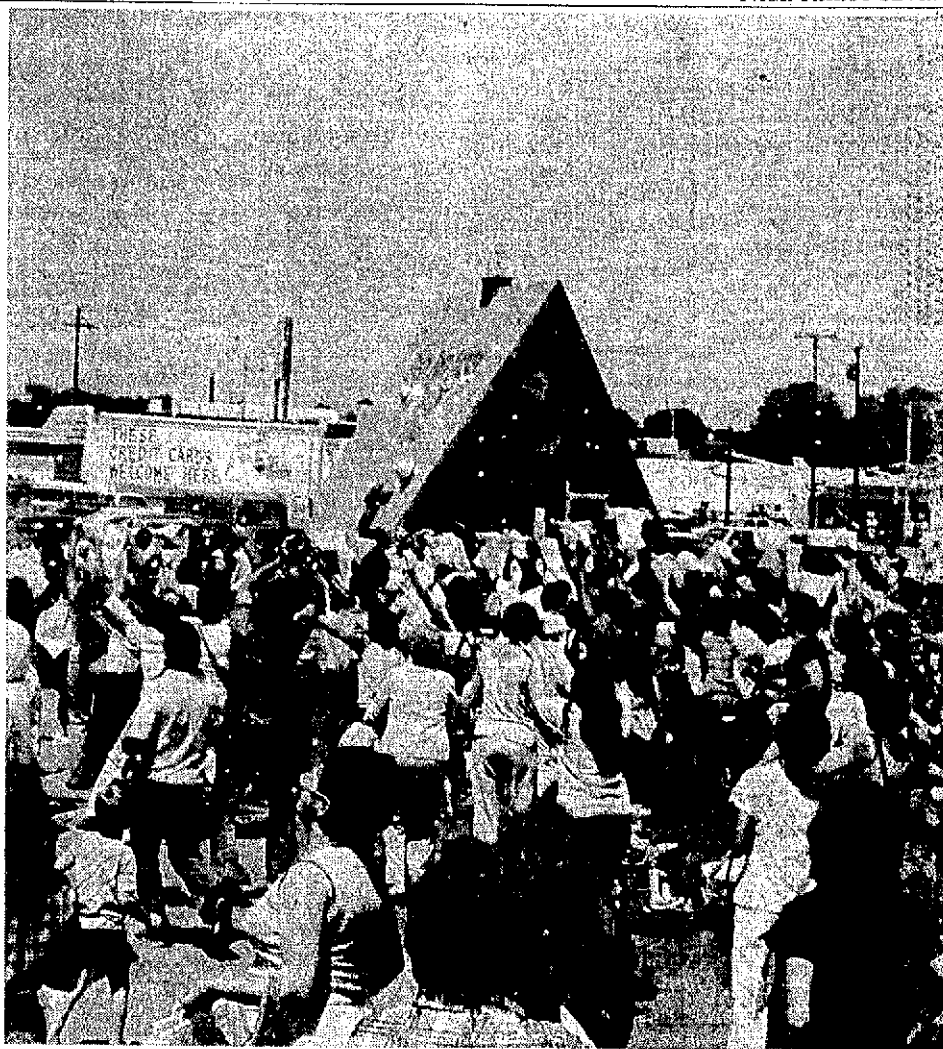

—Daniel K. Smith, 20, of Detroit, who was killed Sunday when he lost control of his motorcycle on a rural road of Plainfield Township of Iosco County.

—Ray Aldrich, 59, of Crosswell, who died in a two-car accident in which five others were injured Sunday on Michigan 25, near Worth Township in southern Sanilac County.

—Fabian D. Dismann, 18, of Sherwood, who died Monday when the vehicle he was driving was hit from the rear by another, left the road and struck a tree. The accident occurred in Calhoun County's Newton Township.

Japanese To Look At Sites

DETROIT (AP) — Executives from an influential Japanese auto industry group were to arrive in Detroit today to begin a tour of industrial sites in Michigan, Ohio and Ontario.

The visit by the nineteen executives — members of the Japanese Auto Parts Industries Association — could mean a lot to the state in terms of jobs and foreign investment.

Japanese auto parts manufacturers have been looking for a Midwestern base to add to their California center, where Toyota and Datsun have American headquarters.

A Midwestern base would allow Japanese firms to sell parts to U.S. automakers and to enter the growing replacement parts market.

The Japanese company presidents and chief managers will be shown that the state has the transportation, skills and organizational support for their businesses, said Edward Dubel, who runs Michigan's four-year-old Office of Economic Expansion outpost in Tokyo.

While in Michigan the Japanese will visit Detroit, Lansing, Grand Rapids and Battle Creek.

In Detroit, they will stay at the Plaza Hotel in the downtown Renaissance Center, meet the mayor, hear presentations by Michigan Consolidated Gas and Detroit Edison and check out industrial sites in suburbs including Farmington Hills and Livonia.

Next week they will visit Ohio and Ontario — but Dubel said, "We hope to get them so exhausted the first week that all they'll want to do is sleep the second week."

The JAPIA has insisted that no purely social events be staged for its members, who will pay their own costs. Sponsoring cities, however, will pay for meals at which they deliver their civic pitches.

No potential business clients — such as the auto companies — will be allowed to wine and dine the visitors, Dubel said.

Gov. William Milliken, however, did manage to squeeze in a meeting on Mackinac Island Wednesday.

JAPIA officials in Chicago have assured complaining Ohio authorities that the event is not too social.

A similar delegation is scheduled to visit Southeastern states next year.

sexual conduct their sons and daughter are following unless something goes wrong. Then they react with shock, blind to the fact that the basic failure is their own — a reflection of our social confusion."

These are just a few reasons. We haven't even mentioned the economies involved, the money that would be saved through less ABC payments. Nor have we considered the health aspects of teen-age mothers, or the psychological aspects of having unwanted children even within a sound marriage. The list is a long one. And its one that I'm sure sexually mature people will agree.

SHE WANTS TO FIGHT CHILD ABUSE

Editor,
I rarely read the paper but I was changing the bag on our vacuum cleaner by our waste paper can when I saw an article in your June 13, 1977, paper.

The article was titled, "Child Abuse in Michigan up 25% in seven years."

I cut it out and read it. Child abuse is an awful thing. I plan to go to college and major in child abuse. Why? I'm worried about our future and the little children's future. I understand a parent or guardian spanking a child to correct it but not beating him or her. When you spank a child, you correct it (supposedly) and it shows you love it (the child) but when you beat your children it shows nothing but stupidity.

If your child needs correction, correct them in a loving way. Please don't beat them. They are precious because they're one of God's special creations. Help out down child abuse by not beating your child and reporting any possible abuse cases. Don't say, "It's none of my business," and stand by and endanger a child's life, because the children of today will be the leaders of our country tomorrow. Thank you.

ORIGINALITY AWARD: Float marking Bangor's 100th birthday won originality award in organization division of community's Centennial parade Sunday.

RETAIL DIVISION WINNER: This float received originality award in retail division of Bangor Centennial parade. It was entered by Dee's Beauty salon.

Stunning Tragedy Clouds Bangor's Birthday Party

BANGOR — This community's Centennial celebration came to a close Monday amid a stunning tragedy.

Terri Lynn Wilson, the Centennial queen, was found dead, brutally beaten and stuffed into the trunk of a car on M-43 northwest of this small city.

As the news filtered through the community in the early hours of Monday, the festive mood of the Centennial faded.

A fashion show where Terri Lynn was to appear was cancelled.

Other activities were carried out, however. A fireworks display closed out the program last night.

The highlight of the celebration was an 80-unit Centennial parade on Sunday and Terri Lynn had been there to preside over it. She also was at a variety show Sunday night.

The parade moved through the community on schedule despite a brief thundershower which struck minutes before the march was to begin.

Parade officials estimated 3,000 people viewed the march.

Awards went to: the Dixieland Jazz band, best performing act; the Simpson United Methodist church, best church float; Waile's Market, best theme, retail division; Dee's Beauty salon, best originality, retail division; Campfire Girls, Kataki council, best originality, organizations; Coloma Gladiolus festival float, beauty award, organizations; Rex Baker, pony team; Van Buren sheriff's posse, best horse unit.

The festival opened Saturday when Mayor James McFarly presented a key to the city to Terri Lynn Wilson.

Summer Wheat Two Weeks Early

By LARRY McDERMOTT

LANSING, Mich. (AP) —

Michigan's summer wheat crop is about two weeks early this year, but farmers are concerned that the lack of rain in the spring will cut drastically into yields.

In Ionia County, one of the state's 10 largest wheat-producing areas, Dale Petrie of Schewen Township delivered one of the state's first loads of red wheat to the grainery last week. White wheat harvesting is expected to get under way this week if the weather permits.

"The old rule is that you normally don't get white wheat before the full moon in July," says Harold Boys, who runs the Ionia Elevator. "The full moon this year is July 16, so it's fair to say the harvest will start a full two weeks ahead of most

But because of dry conditions in the spring, wheat stalks are short and the yield will be about 30 bushels per acre, state agriculture officials report. Rain that fell over most of the state last week was too late to help wheat crops.

"The crops were forced to mature early because we didn't get the rain we needed. The yields definitely are going to be down somewhat, but I don't think we're going to have a disastrous crop or anything like that," says Steve Pseudna of the Department of Agriculture's crop reporting service.

Last year, farmers averaged 38 bushels per acre. Acreage also is down from 980,000 acres harvested last year to a projected 920,000 acres this year.

Some farmers, dissatisfied with market prices and anticipating low yields, are cutting their wheat for hay to feed livestock. Hay crops also are poor this year.

"The price of wheat skyrocketed in the early 1970s with the aid of foreign sales. But they dropped from an average of $6.24 a bushel in 1974 to the current level of about $2.25 a bushel.

"A lot of farmers are unhappy with these prices. They got used to the high prices and now the market's down," Pseudna said.

Farmers also are holding onto stored wheat in hopes the price will go back up. State wheat stocks in storage as of June 1 totaled 12.3 bushels, 68 per cent more than at the same time last year. Farm stocks are nearly double a year ago.

But wheat also is being stored around the country in large quantities, with 30.2 million metric tons on hand — an increase of 67 per cent over last year and the largest amount of wheat held in storage since June 1963.

The over-all U.S. wheat crop this year is 3 per cent less than that planted last year.

SCHOLARSHIP: Bridget Allen, Allegan, received four-year $4,000 college scholarship from Menasha Corp. foundation. Scholarship was among awards to dependents of corporation employees at 29 plants. She is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Allen. Her father is employed at Menasha's Osage Paper mill plant. She will attend Michigan State University.
